Key leaders say Carmel will feel fallout if closure of DLI becomes a reality

By SCOTT BREARTON

FEW PEOPLE in Carmel lost sleep over the prospect of Fort Ord closing, but with other Monterey Peninsula military installations now targeted, there may be some cause for concern.

Though somewhat insulated from problems associated with Fort Ord's closure and reuse, local community leaders concede that Carmel-by-the-Sea will not entirely escape negative economic repurcussions when and if the Monterey Defense Language Institute (DLI) closes as proposed by the Clinton administration.

In fact, at least one community leader in town has started a letter-writing campaign, hoping that with enough community support, Washington officials may reverse their decision.

"I think that it will have an impact on Carmel, absolutely," said Carmel Mayor Ken White. "Probably a light impact.

"There are a number of professors from the DLI that live in Carmel; then you have parents coming to visit their sons and daughters who visit Carmel. It (DLI) adds an immeasurable benefit to the community."

"The Presidio of Monterey has been on the peninsula for more than a century," White added. "It will take some getting used to to have the facility close. It's been part of our social and economic fabric for so long."

Sam Karas, Monterey County 4th District Supervisor, said Monday that "any base closure will affect all peninsula cities."

Citing the frequent use of area shops and businesses by military personnel and their families, Karas speculated that Carmel area businesses would feel the squeeze if the DLI pulls out.

Impact throughout Peninsula

"The impact will be felt throughout the Monterey Peninsula," Karas said. "I don't think Carmel will be insulated from the closure at all."

"Some of the DLI people live in the Carmel area or at least identify with Carmel to some degree," agreed Carl Poolhammer, a political science instructor at Monterey Peninsula College. "There will be some degree of impact."

The latest EDD statistics show Monterey County unemployment at 18.4 percent. This figure is more than twice as high as the national unemployment rate of 7 percent and well above the state's

THE CLEAN up process was lengthy as result of Monday afternoon's accident at Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue. Three people were injured when a flatbed truck overturned. (Lowell Northrop photo)

'I didn't expect to live'

A CARMEL woman survived "the scariest thing I've ever been through," Monday afternoon when a southbound truck overturned while making a right turn onto Ocean Avenue.

"I didn't expect to live," said Anita Whitaker who, along with her son, Jeremy, viewed the unfolding events as they waited to turn left onto Highway 1 at the Ocean Avenue stoplight. Though three people suffered minor injuries in the accident, Whitaker said it was a "miracle" that everybody came out virtually unscathed.

The accident occurred at 2:15 p.m. when the overturned truck rolled onto two cars, which were stopped at the light along with the Whitakers. The impact caused one of the cars to then strike the Whitakers' vehicle.

New supervisorial districts cause for local concern

By PAUL WOLF

AS MONTEREY County looks toward the June 8 ballot and the reconstructed supervisorial voting districts, one thing is clear: The new district lines have more to do with demographics than with geography or regional identities.

A quick study of the new First and Fifth Districts on the map adopted last week by U.S. District Judge William Ingram bears this out.

Analysis

And it hints at why people in Carmel and Carmel Valley are now upset.

While the new District 1 is a compact, densely populated portion of Salinas, District 5 is an enormous area encompassing most of Carmel Valley, all of Big Sur and the peninsula cities.

By law, these two new districts must be comparable in population. But it is plain to see that the 5th District encompasses many times the territory of District 1. It also boasts a tax base as large as the other four districts combined. Few would deny that District 5 embraces most of the county's environmental treasures.

The product of a couple of years of intensive work, the map maximizes minority voting strength under the dictates of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Regional consideration came only after the stipulations of the Act were met.

From the standpoint of peninsula and Carmel Valley interests, the 1993 redistricting is a devastating loss of political

Unanimous stand

Council members cool on desal

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL'S FIVE elected officials, who spend much of their time sharply divided, are united in taking a dim view of the proposed desalting plant.

The Monterey Peninsula as a whole is poised for a debate on the Sand City plant. Although they haven't taken action as a group, Mayor Ken White and his four council colleagues have taken a stand as individuals.

"I'm for the dam, and anything that is going to interfere with that I have a problem with," White said in a telephone interview.

Council members White, Barbara Brooks, Bob Fischer, Barbara Livingston and Phil Coniglio are included in a list of 56 prominent peninsula residents who oppose the desal plant.

The names appear, among a broad political spectrum, on a flier distributed by the Save Our Money For The Dam committee, established by Dick Heuer. Heuer sits on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board and is one of the board's two outspoken desalination opponents.

"If it comes down to a choice between desal and the dam, I'm for the dam," said Coniglio.

Carmel council may end commission's 'public trials'

By PAUL WOLF

CARMEL'S LOUIS Rolle recalls the experience as somewhat like being on Oprah or Donahue. Not that he has had the honor of being a guest on either of those daytime talk shows.

"It was a circus atmosphere," he remembers about his public grilling last August. "I think it is kind of demeaning to people who want to volunteer their time to the city."

The subject here is the Carmel Planning Commission, and what you have to go through to join it. It was last year when the Carmel City Council instituted a public interview process — with the intention of making the selection process more open and ensuring a greater degree of accountability on the mayor, who nominates commission hopefuls.

Now there is an overwhelming sentiment on the council that the experiment has led to more grief than good. Four of the five council members reached by The Carmel Pine Cone said they would be willing to go back to the old way — that is, the mayor nominates, the full council confirms, no public interrogation.

Despite this disenchantment, two more commission aspirants, businessman Charles Fox and architect John Thodos, are slated for public interviews Tuesday.

NIMBY syndrome is at work

THE BREAKING news about the targeted base closures has made for strange bedfellows.

The voices of concern and indignation this week were ubiquitous and violated the standard political divisions. To name a few, there was the Republican governor, Pete Wilson, the new Democratic state senators, Barbara Boxer and Diane Feinstein, and even supposed defense doves like Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Oakland.

Locally, elected officials also protested. And the Monterey County Herald has urged a letter-writing campaign to the relevant elected officials. Even the Carmel Business Association's Toni Jepson, who has so conscientiously represented the town's business interests during the ongoing recession, has followed suit.

While the concern is understandable and in many ways noble, it is hard not to notice the Not-In-My-Backyard (NIMBY) syndrome at work. Most people agree with the national priority of economic conversion and the notion of "shared sacrifice."

This last one is President Clinton's term. Ever since his State of the Union address, he has been buried under a barrage of criticism from Republicans and moderate Democrats alike because his economic plan relies too much on tax hikes and too little on spending cuts.

His reflexive response has been: "More cuts? Show me where." At this moment, we observe that people like cuts in theory but not practice.

We cannot fight back an inexorable national tide, nor ignore the challenge and daunting task of reinventing our economies.

As for immediate concerns, we should turn our attention to a couple of legitimate battles. First, to ensure that California — which houses 10 of the 30 bases targeted for closure on the current lists — is being treated fairly. Second, to hold the president to his promise to fully support economic conversion and new retraining opportunities.

A close relative of the NIMBY syndrome demands, "Please, not my pocketbook." Certainly we know that when our decision-makers can't make hard choices, that is exactly how we get deficits.

No doubt, this week's unlikely alliances admirably show how our state and local officials are prepared to safeguard our welfare. But we must not be blind to our national purpose and our own long-term interests.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

Perpetuating jazz

Dear Editor:

Hats off to Music Director Dick Robins and the talented jazz musicians from Carmel High School.

Their concert at Sunset Center last Wednesday, to benefit the Carmel schools music program and the Sunset Center renovation, is a tribute to the importance of music to these young people. Their weekend performance at Dixieland Monterey is an encouragement to jazz buffs, who might be concerned about the perpetutation of jazz.

Both the Carmel High Jazz Ensemble and the Carmel Marching and Chowder Society Jazz Band (including Barney Liaolo on the washbucket and Lindsey Webb on vocals) deserve our congratulations and our support. Let's all help to keep music "alive and well" at CHS.

Faulty logic

Dear Editor:

Larry Hart presented a plea (Pine Cone, 25 Feb.) for supporting a desalinizer for obtaining additional water for our use. I have no public position on the desalinizer but I find two faults in his arguments:

1) He opines that "...the long range forecast for rain is not encouraging." This writer has been a professional hydrologist for more than 45 years and still searches for any person/any method than can successfully forecast rainfall next month, let alone "long range."

2) He states that a lesser use of ground water will slow sea-water intrusion into the lower Salinas Valley. There certainly is a serious problem there but it has no connection whatsoever with the pumping of Cal-Am's water wells in the Carmel Valley, a major source of our water supply in the summer and fall. Indeed, I believe that Cal-Am could add another well or two near Highway 1 without any detrimental environmental effect.

Farina supporter

Dear Editor:

The best political news I have heard in a long time is that Fran Farina has decided to run for Supervisor in the 5th District now that Karin Strasser Kauffman has decided not to run.

I have always been impressed with Fran Farina's intelligence, her ability to understand the issues and her constancy in, supporting the rights of citizens and the rights of the environment.

As an elected member of the Water Board, Ms. Farina has once again shown her ability to serve the public in a decisive, intelligent and fair manner. In my opinion, she is an ideal candidate for the post of supervisor.

Positive coverage

Dear Editor:

I am writing to thank The Pine Cone for its continuing coverage of the Barracuda Aquatics swim program. Other media too often concentrate on the negative things that are happening with our area children, such as drug and alcohol abuse. My two children have been involved with the Barracudas for six years, and in that time have developed healthy bodies, strong work ethics, and wonderful friendships. The kids aren't the only ones who benefit, as my wife and I have found the other swimmers' parents share pretty much the same feelings about strong family and community involvement. Thank you again for supporting the club by reporting meet results and individual swimmer achievements.

Backer of Karas

Dear Editor:

During 1991 and 1992 I had the pleasure of coordinating the Citizens Coalition to Save Monastery Beach. This citizens group succeeded in preserving an historic enclave and saved the state of California taxpayers over a million dollars. Our efforts could not have been successful without the help of County Supervisor Sam Karas.

For eight years now, Sam Karas has been the champion for citizens rights in the 5th District and throughout Monterey County. Without his leadership, citizens of the 5th District would be at the mercy of a politician who furthers her own agenda, not the will of the people. Sam has been the guardian of not just the 4th and 5th Districts, but of us all. I am grateful for his leadership and I am thrilled to see him announce his candidacy for 5th District supervisor. I support Sam Karas for 5th District supervisor.

Misleading statements

Dear Editor:

In the March 4 article about Rancho San Carlos, The Pine Cone quoted Bill Patterson, whom I do not know, saying I built an airfield without a permit, and that I filled in San Clemente dam. Don Wilcoxon of Rancho San Carlos was quoted that I wrote a letter offering to look the other way about environmental concerns for $1 million.

These are ridiculous, and it only shows the misleading statements and propaganda being spread by the Rancho San Carlos development machine.

The airport in question was leased and

Will 'near-term' desal plant doom plans for dam?

By PAUL WOLF

DURING A lively public hearing and deliberations on desalination Monday evening, there was one question that seemed to carry the most weight.

It goes something like this: Would pursuing the Sand City desalting plant now kill the dam later?

It is the new dam on the Carmel River, nearly everyone agrees, that is the more important project both for boosting water supply and improving the health of the river.

Some at the Monterey Council Chambers, where peninsula water directors met March 8, declared desal was not a smart preoccupation for those eager for a dam. Others said desal will not interfere with the prospects of a long-term water supply solution.

The meeting was staged as the final "protest hearing" on the near-term project in advance of the June 8 ballot. Voters will either authorize the $32 million facility or reject it.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board voted 6-0 (with Director Fran Farina absent) to schedule the election and allow the electorate to make up its mind.

While a new Los Padres dam on the Carmel River has been described as anywhere from several years away to decades off, the desal plant is characterized as the "near-term" water supply solution.

Carmel council cool on desal plant

Likewise, Fischer said, "With both projects it would be over $100 million, and I just don't think we should push both projects at one time."

As for Livingston, she called desalination "too much money for too little water."

Brooks agreed with Livingston on the issue of cost. "I think we ought to be concentrating our efforts on getting the dam," Brooks said.

A confusing dimension

The whole issue takes on a confusing dimension: The combination of a desalination plant and a new dam are packaged together into a single "alternative" within the framework of the long-term environmental impact report.

Many opponents of desalination are less critics of the specific Sand City project than they are critics of anything that could stop the dam.

"The vote on the desal plant is, in effect, a vote on the dam," said Carmel Valley resident Edwin Lee before the board began deliberations. "The first project that is supported will be the last for a long, long time."

Carmel resident Alan Williams disagreed, stressing that the two projects are intended to go in succession and the public is aware of that. "Letting the people decide (if they want desal) is the right and proper thing to do," Williams said.

He spoke of the three million gallons of water that the plant will be able to produce each day as "an insurance policy" that may serve in the interim before the dam is constructed.

The public hearing included as many supporters as opponents of desal. Even the strongest opponents, such as Director Dick Heuer, supported the opportunity to vote on the matter.

Many familiar arguments were spelled out — on the need for the plant, the quality of the water it would produce, and the financing mechanisms both for the capital costs and operating expenses.

Taking sides

Supporters of desalination are looking forward to the project helping support managed growth and boosting supply during dry periods. Opponents say the plant is a lot of money for little gain and isn't actually needed.

But the key issue was whether the two water supply projects are complementary or mutually exclusive. Directors said it is imperative that the public be fed accurate information between now and election day. It appears that just as the citizenry must determine if it wants a desal plant, it must now also decide whether it would be willing to support another water supply project some time in the not-too-distant future.

Water director Farina reportedly to seek supervisor's seat

WATER BOARD member Fran Farina has decided to run for the Fifth District seat on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, The Pine Cone has learned.

Farina could not be reached for confirmation because she was traveling in Peru.

Farina was elected to a four-year term on the board of directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District in 1991. She would running for Karin Strasser Kauffman's current spot.

The filing period for the June 8 supervisorial election ends April 1. Farina has yet to take out any papers from the county's elections department.

If she enters the race as expected, she faces current Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas. Strasser Kauffman has announced she will not seek re-election. (See page 14 for details.)

Pine Cone's companion to key questions on referendum, zoning

RUMOR HAS it that Carmel will soon be flooded with "fact sheets" on the subject of the June 8 referendum on downtown commercial zoning.

No doubt, all of them will claim to be objective, though some — depending on their authors — will try to lead readers in a certain direction.

The Pine Cone has taken great pains to live up to its claim of objectivity. Regardless of how one evaluates our success, the following should not be considered the last word on the subject, but a solid beginning.

Why is this zoning issue such a big controversy? Is that much at stake?

It depends on whom you ask. There is no doubt, however, that the ordinance, finalized by the city council last December, would have sweeping implications if it is ratified by the voters June 8. Just for starters, it deals with what kinds of businesses can be established in which districts.

What is wrong with the existing zoning?

That also depends of whom you ask. But, after two and a half years of study, the idea was to keep what is working and throw out what helps neither residents nor business people.

The permit process is independent yet related to zoning, and so it was studied within the scope of the ordinance. Speeding up the permit process has been enough of a community concern that, in the spring of 1992, mayoral opponents Ken White and Barney Laiolo agreed streamlining was a priority even though they agreed on little else.

Let's say the ordinance is repealed by the referendum. Is it true both the disputed elements and the mutually admired elements can't be touched for a year?

Yes. And that is something everyone regrets. But opponents contend that, whatever the merits of the ordinance, there is enough in it that is damaging to the city to warrant its repeal.

If, however, the ordinance is ratified by the voters, the council can start to work on correcting whatever flaws it would like to address. However, what to change after the election could well prove as controversial as what preceded the election.

What are those objections?

A little background may be in order first. The ordinance takes a new look at the three commercial zoning districts set up in 1984. They are "central-commercial (CC)," "service-commercial (SC)," and "residential/limited commercial (RC)."

The closer one moves toward Ocean Avenue, the uses permitted become more "intensive." Gift shops and jewelry stores are classic examples of CC uses.

Classic SC uses are markets, hardware stores, medical offices and repair shops. Many would fit the notion of "mom-and-pop" establishments.

Opponents of the ordinance argue that, if ratified, the ordinance will open the door to greater commercialization and the further erosion of the residential character of Carmel.

The ordinance, for starters, would change commercial zoning in two ways: first, it expands the most intensive district, the CC, about a half block by pushing the southern boundary all the way to 7th Avenue between Mission and Lincoln; second, a number of uses that have been prohibited in the SC and RC would be allowed.

How about examples of what uses are possible under the new zoning framework?

Let's start with the service-commercial district, set up as a haven for service and retail businesses that serve

Carmel schools encounter bouts with exhibitionists

By SCOTT BREARTON

A 20-year-old male was arrested March 1 on the Carmel High School campus for allegedly exposing himself to a female student.

According to CHS Assistant Principal Pat Beebe, the individual was working across the street at a private residence when he came on campus, apparently intending to use the bathrooms.

"He exposed himself to a student in the hallway after he left the restroom," Beebe said. "His story was that he forgot to zip up his zipper."

"I personally think that was his way of downplaying the seriousness of what he did," said Bruce Palmer, day watch Sergeant with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

The student immediately reported the incident at the office, at which time administrators called the sheriff's department. The man left campus, then returned, according to Beebe. When he returned, Dennis Handy, a campus supervisor, detained him in the CHS parking lot until deputies arrived.

Beebe said that by law, all visitors are required to check in at the main office before entering, which this visitor did not.

The incident marks the second time this year Monterey County Sheriff's deputies have responded to complaints of indecent exposure on or near school grounds.

In February, a man in his mid-30s was arrested near Carmel Middle School after cheerleaders reported an individual allegedly exposing himself in the field between Carmel Rancho Shopping Center and the CMS tennis courts.

According to Palmer, the man was lying in the field, stark naked on the well-worn path frequented by students. "He was not just 'Joe Citizen' sunning himself," Palmer said. "He wanted to make sure they (female students) saw him."

Palmer said the Sheriff's Department is looking at the individual as a possible suspect in several other cases, around the City of Carmel and in the Monterey County area.

"Parent alert"

In the February CMS newsletter, Principal Karl Pallastrini issued a "parent alert," cautioning students against walking through the fields after school, and recommending they not travel alone.

"The individual was arrested by the sheriff's department due to some excellent police work by our cheerleaders," Pallastrini wrote. "We hope that the problem has been resolved."

Palmer called the two incidents "isolated, unrelated cases." The maximum penalty for the misdemeanor offense is one year in county jail.

"In both instances, we went to the D.A.'s office with a complaint, Palmer said. "We are very fortunate. There has probably been just a handful of crimes like this in the many years I've worked in the area."

Hatton freeway: Dinosaur of an idea

By Linda L. Smith

ON MARCH 24 the Traffic Agency for Monterey County (TAMC) will vote on whether to support Hatton Canyon Freeway or to pursue a less destructive, less expensive alternative. While this vote is important, it is by no means the final word. In the end, the aeons of evolutionary genius represented by 13+ acres of rare wetlands and the complex watershed that feeds them will have the final say. Thankfully federal law now mandates the protection of wetlands, for we have already destroyed 92 percent of our wetlands here in California.

Many say that this issue has been hanging around for too long and that we should therefore proceed with the freeway. We would do well to remember the tortoise and the hare..."Slow and easy wins the race." In the 40 years that the freeway has been planned so much of the natural environment has been destroyed without even a second thought, until the consequences of such "quick" decision making are now rushing in at us from all sides ... hemorrhaging of biodiversity, ozone depletion, global warming, and toxic pollution. Since we are still neophytes in our understanding of this miracle of which we are a part, shouldn't we exercise a healthy humility, given how often we have been wrong? If we err let us err on the side of caution where destruction of the earth is concerned. Our profligate ways have already cheated our youth and posterity out of their natural birthright. We have been given a chance here to save Hatton Canyon for them to cherish.

We can all help solve our rather insignificant traffic problems (by city standards) by watching how we use our cars, by asking our public officials for bike lanes, walking paths, cheaper, more convenient mass transit, and then using them. These options along with a less destructive, more modest alternative to the freeway would be the responsible path to take.

To say that because Federal money is allocated for the freeway and because Caltrans insists on the freeway that therefore we should accept the freeway is fallacious reasoning. It is frankly surprising at this juncture in our national history to hear such talk. At a time when we need to be good stewards of our beleaguered earth and pocketbooks, it seems the height of profligacy. The freeway is expensive, destructive beyond any justification, a dinosaur of an idea from an outmoded way of thought.

Karin Strasser Kauffman is to be commended for her shift on the freeway. She is right. Pursuing this project is a waste of time, money and precious energy. A permit would in all likelihood never be issued because the loss of unique wetlands could never be mitigated. The process would take years. Now there is a real waste of money for you!

Sam Farr let the TAMC know that with the new environmentally responsible administration in Washington, money for the sort of sensitive alternative we need is very likely to be available. He encouraged Caltrans to come off its hard line, unreasonable stance and to move into the future with us.

Contrary to freeway proponents assertions, the opponents to this project are not just a vocal minority. Those who do oppose it are passionate in their position. They value the beautiful canyon. They respect the trees, plants and animals whose home it is and the larger forest of which it is a part. They want a traffic solution, but not one bought through the destruction of this rich and irreplaceable ecosystem. They cherish the remaining natural beauty of our area and want to preserve it for future generations. They know what an LA style freeway would mean for our future. They are conservative in the best sense of the word.

I would wager that many who are for the freeway would be against it if they had the facts, if they knew that it wouldn't solve many of the problems that concern them. Caltrans Draft EIS states that there would still be significant delays on Carmel Valley Road and on Highway 1 south of Rio Road. A more modest solution would produce adequate traffic relief.

TAMC has been deluged with letters against the freeway. Over 100 of them come from Carmel High and Middle School students. These letters should give us all hope for the future. They are sensitive, thoughtful and display a common sense that is refreshing. These kids are the ones who will inherit this earth from us, and they went to have all that they can of it for their own children and grand-children.

It would be wonderful if we all could exercise the self-restraint that this era demands and cooperate to find a solution that we can live with. Now is the time for us to keep in mind respect for the natural world which gives us our very life and the need to preserve what remains for our posterity.

Officials hope to put bite into replanting rules

By PAUL WOLF

AN ORDINANCE is only as good as its teeth.

With that in mind, city officials are hoping to put a little bite into certain requirements that help preserve the ailing pine forest on Carmel's private property.

The problem of enforcement comes in the following context. Frequently, when a property owner presents a request to build on his or her lot, the Carmel Planning Commission and City Council will pass on certain tree-planting requirements with project approval.

Unfortunately, the city's planning department has no system to monitor or enforce that the trees are left in or cared for.

"That we should have the power to require that a tree is planted, but not to enforce anything afterward shows me there is something wrong here," said Carmel Mayor Ken White.

White was speaking Tuesday, March 9, at a special joint meeting of the city council and the Carmel Forest and Beach Commission. It was one of those sessions where many problems were identified, but specific solutions were left for later action.

Accepting human nature

Perhaps council members and commissioners were accepting human nature — that people cannot always be entrusted with orders.

Trees are often required, planted, and then they are taken out. After all, a couple of seedlings may have been called for because a towering pine or oak wasn't wanted in the first place.

Sometimes, admittedly, trees are removed and there has been no wilfull wrongdoing, city officials say. New owners take over a property and they are unaware that certain tiny trees were put in under city dictates.

"Now we have no laws and no rules about enforcement, and its very aggravating," said commissioner Roy Thomas. "There is a requirement (to plant), but there is no requirement to keep the tree."

The city, it was agreed, should be able to impose a fine anyone who either does not have a healthy tree after a certain period of time has elapsed or who should have known better.

Karen Ferlito suggested that trees should be tagged — not just to distinguish them as required plantings, but as a way of keeping certain instructions for care always on hand. Commissioner Don Kremer, apparently in the minority, thought the tagging idea was going too far.

White said he will present the matter to City Attorney Don Freeman. In the near future, the issue will return to the council for action.

Familiar topic

It has become a familiar topic that the city is slowly losing its pines on private property, while the canopy is being well-maintained on public property. There are a number of reasons for this slow loss — the maturation of the pine forest, the introduction of exotic trees, the six-year drought and the construction of bigger homes on lots formerly occupied by Carmel's modest cottages and artist's studios.

It has been no help that the city's rules on planting have had no bite. Said Councilwoman Barbara Livingston. "I like this — this is finally putting teeth into our ordinances."

Directors Guild award to Clint could forecast big Oscar night

By JOHN DETRO

MORE AND more, it looks as if former Carmel mayor Clint Eastwood will score a personal triumph when Oscar night dances across TV screens on March 29.

Last weekend, the highly influential Directors Guild of America (DGA) named Eastwood top director of 1992 for his stark Western entitled Unforgiven.

The DGA prize usually forecasts Oscar results. Since 1949, only three directors have won it and failed to nab the Academy Award for Best Director.

Unforgiven shows ex-gunslinger Will Munny's drunken return to the killer role. After major critics' organizations lauded the frankly deconstructionist view of outlaw myths, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences came through with nine nominations —including best picture and best director.

Eastwood's comments were brief as he accepted the DGA award on Saturday night at the Beverly Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles: "I don't know what to say. I'm not really a blabbermouth."

He did offer the opinion that today's "concern with gunplay in society" makes Unforgiven a timely film.

Phones to operate

THE OFFICE of The Carmel Pine Cone will have phone service after all on Thursday, March 11.

In the March 4 issue, it was reported phone service would be shut off most of the day in The Pine Cone's office due to construction by PG&E. The construction work will now, however, be performed in the evening.

We Understand the Paperwork

For those brave souls who try to sell their homes without the services of a professional Realtor, the paperwork is a major cause for concern. With many new requirements that state and local governments have covering everything from disclosures to tenant's rights, using the old stationary boilerplate contract can be a risky proposition.

We understand the paperwork and know the pitfalls that can render a contract unenforceable. In so many transactions, the buyers have at least some desire to back out of the contract between ratification and settlement. If the paperwork does not meet the precise legal requirements of your jurisdiction, they will be able to do it. Unless the terms are set forth in a clear and unambiguous way, you could find yourself in a settlement table dispute that will cost you a substantial amount of money. Many of the homes that we list started out as "For Sale by Owner" transactions that went wrong. Often, the costs of unravelling the failed contracts exceed the broker's fees.

developed, after obtaining all the proper permits by Ray Phillips in 1966. This includes county permit, FAA airspace, and California Bureau of Aeronautics license. Several years later, his lease was terminated when he could no longer afford repair and maintenance of the facility due to several years of extremely severe winter storms. Some siltation did reach San Clemente reservoir during this period, but it was already full of silt from over 70 years of use. No claims were ever made on Mr. Phillips. I offer The Pine Cone the opportunity to inspect my records.

Further, Wilcoxon's quote is grossly incorrect. Wilcoxon well knows that during our negotiations in early 1992, I wrote a letter to him and Tom Gray (RSC managing partner), itemizing our damages should we agree to accommodate Rancho San Carlos. Relocating our access road, we said, would amount to a $1 million devaluation of our ranch.

Also, Jeffrey Froke's statement that our land use density is "four times greater" than Rancho San Carlos' proposal is also misleading. San Clemente Rancho is a recreation ranch of some 2,000 acres, with only a small part being utilized for "weekend and vacation family cabins." Permanent residence is not permitted. The quantity of water used by our members, on a per capita basis, is infinitesimal compared to a full time residential community such as that proposed by Rancho San Carlos.

At one time, I was supportive of the ranch's goals. But as the scope of their development plan became clearer, we concluded this was not the proper use or density for the San Clemente drainage. Your readers should have all the facts regarding our stand. In the future, let us stick to the issue — the Rancho San Carlos development.

The worm turns

Dear Editor:

Once again upon a time, the black clouds have descended upon Carmel-by-the-Sea, a lovely hamlet in America with many Hansel and Gretel cottages, just like in the Bavarian forests.

Out of Carmelthal (Carmel Valley) and into Carmel-by-the-Sea, with thundering hoof beats and a cry of "The T-Shirts are coming, the T-Shirts are coming," has ridden a Whining Knight in Shining Armor. Auslander (Foreigner) Albert Iceman has embarked on a crusade to save the good burghers of Carmel from themselves and from their Burgomeister and Hamlet Council.

After the Hamlet Council voted a corrective zoning provision in December, moving the Central Commercial District line back to Seventh Avenue, where it used to be, Auslander Iceman assembled a group of elves to initiate a referendum to undo the work of the good Council.

Auslander Iceman and his elves got their wish. There would be a referendum, that is, of course, if the Hamlet Council honorably stood behind their December vote.

But how the worm turns! Now, Auslander Iceman and his elves did NOT want the referendum they worked for. They wanted the good Hamlet Council to back down, but the Council had the backbone to back up their original position.

Good Burgomeister White, after his wise consultations with the good burghers of the hamlet, voted to let Auslander Iceman and his elves have what they originally wanted, a referendum. The scene is now set for a medieval jousting match on June 8, when Auslander Iceman and his elves will do battle with the brave forces favoring Good Burgomeister White.

Long live the Good and Honorable Burgomeister White.

A fair role

Dear Editor:

Our fair, honest, besieged mayor cast the deciding vote March 2, 1993. A fair, decent vote. Many of us silent majority were hoping for the chance to vote. We believe the council voted correctly, the first time.

About the Feb. 23, 1993 advertisement in The Herald:

We also want to apologize to our hard working, beautiful business community. That was a deceitful, rotten, dirty trick. I understand your collective attorney is now monitoring your proceeds before and after that ad taken out by a few people in a power play — using you, to gain control of our council. We, too, are outraged, angry and disgusted by such an act.

We have heard how betrayed and hurt you restaurant people feel. You prepared that beautiful array of food for the Carmel Residents that Sunday afternoon before that ad. Now, you know, that all the while many in that room were eating your donations, given upon many occasions. The people responsible and the many who knew about that ad beforehand knew when the cock crowed on Tuesday morning that bomb landed carrying their attack upon your livelihood. Carmel's Last

Selection process for planning commissioners criticized

March 16. The special meeting will begin at 3:30 p.m. in the Carmel City Council Chambers.

The show must go on. Despite council members disenchantment with the process, that process will prevail until the guiding ordinance on commission picks is amended.

Rolle's case

In the case of someone like Rolle, the experience of "public grilling," as he described it, was particularly painful. He was rejected by the council on a 2-2 vote. Councilwoman Barbara Brooks had been away traveling on emergency business. The four-person quorum selected Carl Livingston as the new commissioner.

At the time, it was clear that council members were in the embarrassing position of publicly choosing among candidates who appeared, each undisputably eager and qualified.

"I felt it was perfectly OK," remembered Livingston. "I enjoyed the fun of it. For me, I just feel it is an additional layer of bureaucracy that we don't need."

But it has been clear that most of those interviewed in the Carmel Council Chambers have not been as comfortable as Livingston.

Usually, Mayor White would find himself telling the commission candidates to sit back and take a deep breath. Then would come the flurry of questions about philosophy and approach and affiliations that are more befitting a U.S. Senate confirmation hearing than a selection process for a voluntary board.

"I don't know why we needed to put them through this," Councilwoman Barbara Livingston (no relation to Carl Livingston) said.

White said he plans to bring the matter up for discussion and possible action as soon as possible. He said there has been "quite a number" of qualified people whose interest in the commission has dissolved as they have thought of the unpleasant ordeal awaiting them.

Theory and practice

"The process is good in concept," White said. "I want to bring this to the other council members to see how they feel."

As it stands, there appears to be enough support on the council for going back to the old system — having the mayor nominate and the council confirm without a public interview.

"I never have liked this system," said Councilman Bob Fischer. "It is very time-consuming and it embarrasses the candidates."

Councilman Phil Coniglio agreed. "I never thought it should have been started in the first place," he said. "It is too much like a public trial."

Finally, it may have Louis Rolle who made the most telling point. "The city didn't interview their candidates for city administrator in this kind of circus atmosphere."

As it turns out, also at the March 16 meeting, there may be an announcement about status of the search for a new city administrator. That selection process, unlike that of the picking new commissioners, has been handled quietly and privately by a city-hired firm working in conjunction with the city council.

Carmel Middle School students take home awards at History Day

NINETEEN CARMEL Middle School students ran away with all but four of the 14 top honors awarded in the Junior Division (grades 6-8) at the third annual Monterey County History Day competition held recently at Pacific Grove High School.

CMS seventh and eighth-grade history buffs competed Feb. 27 against other students from Walter Colton Middle, Pacific Grove Middle, and Junipero Serra schools. The theme for this year's competition was "Communication in History: the Key to Understanding."

The results were impressive:

•Eighth-graders Erin Miller and Shannon Dougherty took second place in the Group Media category for a video presentation entitled "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again." The video explored how popular music reflects the way people feel during times of war.

•Eighth-grader Gretchen Olvera won first place in the Individual Media category, with a video entitled "Communication Through Animation."

•Eighth-graders Aron Baker, Christopher Capestro, Daniel Palshaw, Jason Waller and Lindley Zerbe captured first place in the Group Performance category. Their project was entitled "Commercials: They're Part of Your Life."

Seventh-graders Tracy Davis, Arwen Eversz and Jamie Eccher took second place with a performance called "The Guide to Freedom."

•Eighth-graders Elizabeth McVey, Nicole Robinson, Erin Schelcher and Nancy Valdez earned first place honors in the Group Project Display category, with a piece entitled "Express Yourself."

Seventh-graders Cicely Cleary and Cameron Cox finished a close second

Fourth possibility

Dear Editor:

After looking at the three proposals for treatment of the area in front of the Fifth Avenue post office, I should like to suggest another idea as a fourth possibility.

Instead of closing the street entirely or force us retirees to drive through the parking lot enroute to the open eastern part of Fifth and as an alternative to doing nothing, how about doing something quite simple and at almost no cost? Take the green parking space immediately outside the northeast doors to the post office and paint it red. Then put in a crosswalk leading from the post office across the street to the parking lot — one with large wide diagonal stripes for easy visibility.

If you observe the customer activities there, you will never find us going to the corner to use the crosswalk. We take the most direct route to the lot and that is out the door and across the street with a hope that no one will come around the corner off Dolores and bump into us as we do our jaywalking maneuver. Provide an element of safety and an open space at the curb to start from and we can solve the majority of potential pedestrian hazards at almost no cost, one would think.

Community leaders warn of fallout from DLI closure rate of 9.8 percent, according to state EDD statistics.

Citing the $94 million in DLI payroll that circulates through the local economy annually, Karas estimated that by closing the DLI, "we would lose about 2,500 more jobs throughout the county."

Phil Nash, Dean of Community Education at MPC, is concerned about a drop in enrollment at the junior college due to the DLI closure, as well as the ongoing economic recession.

Nash said that many of the some 2,500 employees currently working at the Presidio take classes at MPC. "In addition, many of them have dependents who are college-aged," he said.

Nash noted that military personnel are living in Carmel as well as other peninsula cities, evident by the high number of rental properties in the village. "There's got to be some military people living there," he said.

"We have a three-legged economy here: agriculture, military and tourism," said Nash, "And you know what happens when one of the legs on a three-legged milk stool is taken away – it collapses."

Nash said the direct result of the military leaving the area will be "a great decrease in the general fund of every entity on the peninsula (including Carmel), due to reduced tax revenue."

A reduced general fund means city layoffs, including local police and fire protection, said Nash, noting that the quality of life that we've all enjoyed on the Peninsula is based – in part – on how safe we feel.

'Hit harder'

According to a position paper developed by Monterey City Manager Fred Meurer and consultants hired by that city to sway Washington officials, "Monterey County has been hit harder by Department of Defense downsizing than any other county in the nation."

Meurer was in Washington D.C. last week, fighting the possible closure of the DLI and Naval Postgraduate School. He is working with consultants to develop arguments for keeping the schools open, particularly the DLI.

Patrick Wyatt, President of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, mailed a letter March 5 to President Clinton, outlining the community's concerns in regard to the possible closure of either the Naval Postgraduate School or the DLI.

"While our community has not yet felt the full educational, financial or social ramifications of the closure of Fort Ord," Wyatt wrote, "we are attempting to deal with it in a positive manner with our Fort Ord recovery efforts. The loss of either DLI or NPGS would seriously undermine these efforts... Monterey has already sacrificed its share of defense conversion, in the name of national interest.

"...it appears to make better military or economic sense to consolidate other agencies' efforts to both the Defense Language Institute and/or the Naval Postgraduate School rather than closing them," Wyatt concluded, "and we would like to see any proposal to close DLI or NPGS reversed before the list is released in early March."

But with no local representation in Congress since Leon Panetta's resignation from the 17th District seat, Poolhammer said it could be difficult to influence Washington officials to keep the DLI in Monterey.

"The whole point is, who do you get the argument to?" asked Poolhammer. "I think there is a distant possibility that once we get a congressman in place – in three or four months – we might be able to get the DLI off that list. Otherwise, there's nobody to talk to."

Poolhammer noted, however, that freshmen congressmen generally have little influence in Washington.

"The only argument we really have going for us is that we're already losing Fort Ord," Poolhammer said. "I don't think that argument is going to fly in Washington."

Poolhammer said that economic impacts alone probably won't be enough to sway the U.S. Department of Defense, since communities across the nation are having to face converting their defense-

Captain Cooper students' art to be displayed at Monterey Airport

CAPTAIN COOPER students are among 23 classes whose sea worthy works of art will be displayed at the Monterey Airport, March 13 through June 13.

The young artists attended a reception Feb. 21 at the Monterey Bay Aquarium, which sponsors the annual poster contest. The class theme for this year's event is "Keep Monterey Bay Clean for People and Sea Creatures."

While the children had visited the aquarium a month earlier on a school field trip, the reception provided an opportunity to explore the facility while it was closed to the public.

Showing their sea-going spirit, the children stand below a classroom whale mural donated by the Velvet Creamery. 'Carmel is not insulated' from closure based economies to civilian.

In other words, the Monterey Peninsula is not alone, though it seems to have received more than its fair share of base closures resulting from Department of Defense downsizing.

"In the last analysis, I think that if you're going to argue for downsizing the Department of Defense," said Poolhammer, "it's difficult to argue to keep the DLI there."

Poolhammer noted that while many Americans agree this is a good time to cut from the defense budget, the NIMBY (Not In My Backyard) syndrome persists.

Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association, is quite concerned about the Pentagon's latest disclosure.

"It will definitely have a very negative impact on the entire economy," Jepson said. "I just feel that enough is enough. We've been urging our (CBA) members to write our congressmen, to urge them to not allow these closures – at both the Naval Postgraduate School and the DLI.

"There are 1,100 civilians employed there," Jepson said. "It's just one more straw to break the camel's back. Carmel is not insulated from these closures. We are going to feel the effects."

"Mr. Panetta has not issued a comment on the matter," said Barry Toiv, press secretary for the new director of Office of Management and Budget. "We don't know yet, based on the fact that the Secretary of Defense (Les Aspin) hasn't issued a final decision."

Carmel's mayor has additional concerns.

"I think it would be a terrible mistake to reduce the emphasis on foreign language for generations to come," said White, looking at the larger picture. "When those students complete their enlistment in the service, they will be available to help our businesses and industry maintain a competitive edge in the world economy."

Already reeling from the gradual closure of 17 military bases, California is bracing itself for the next series of closures.

The Monterey Presidio is among 10 military installations statewide that have been targeted for closure, senior Pentagon officials announced last week.

Series of events honor women during March

By JOHN DETRO

AN EVENT honoring its Women of the Year has been scheduled by the California Park Service's Monterey District for 9:30 a.m. Friday, March 12, at Asilomar Conference Grounds.

All interested parties are invited to attend the gathering at no cost. Ranger Roxann Jacobus will handle any questions (372-4076).

The 1993 theme is Maritime Women: Protectors, Preservationists and Explorers. Spotlighted through the agency selection are Emily Fish, Donna Penwell and Drs. Mary Silver and Cynthia Pilskaln.

Jacobus said the honorees will be introduced by speakers who know their work, with Penwell, Silver and Pilskaln in attendance. A reception will follow.

Jacobus will talk about Emily Fish, Pt. Pinos lighthouse keeper from 1893 to1914. "During her tenure," it was stated, "she not only operated the lighthouse but was active in the community and local Red Cross."

The career of Penwell, who is the Maritime Museum Director, will be detailed by Phil Nash of Monterey Peninsula College. With more than 12 years of experience in exhibit design and museum administration, Penwell worked for the State of California and is past influence compared with the plan the county has been living under since 1981.

Raza map focuses on demographics, not geography

"It's true the Fifth District will look even more gorgeous with the new territory it will have added on," said the current Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman. "But in terms of being able to defend the district with one vote on the board of supervisors, it is going to be quite a challenge."

An unofficial partnership has wedded the Fourth and Fifth Districts, as Strasser Kauffman and Fourth District Supervisor Sam Karas have seen eye-to-eye on the many important issues.

It should be noted that Karas, who does not live within the newly patterned 4th District, is now running for Fifth District. Meanwhile, Strasser Kauffman has dropped out from the race, although not for any reasons that have to do with the Raza map. (See profile on Strasser Kauffman on page 14.)

In the map's framework, the Fourth District represents only Seaside, Sand City, Marina and Fort Ord; it will no longer embrace the whole of Pacific Grove or a portion of Pebble Beach, and so the 4th District is set to lose its environmental perspective.

Dozens of maps had been considered and debated over, and the new map, although rejected by the board of supervisors, was approved by the judge March 3.

The new plan provides for two supervisorial districts with Hispanic majorities. "I believe this is fair to ensure that minorities who have not been represented" get a better shot, said Karas.

Nevertheless, Karas acknowledged that the regional interests of peninsula communities are undermined as a result.

In North County, residents resent the carving of their terrain: What used to be all District 1 is now parceled out between Districts 2 and 3. In Carmel Valley, residents have been relying on one supervisor only; now a portion of the valley, including hundreds of homes, near Los Laureles Grade has been swallowed up by District 2.

"I prefer the geographical approach myself," said Roger Williams, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Associations. "The valley has been historically all one district."

Williams explained it is natural for voters to unite in a region based on what happens in their midst — on issues like road improvements, proposed projects and water issues.

In the perennial struggle between growth and preservation, the slow-growing areas may have lost an important battle. "I think we will end up with a board of supervisors that is more development-prone," Karas said.

But in politics, everything is a tradeoff, explained David Yamada, a political science instructor at Monterey Peninsula College.

"The priority of the Voting Rights Act is to give greater political weight to ethnic and racial minorities," said Yamada. "But the 1965 Act didn't anticipate certain incongruities."

And what are these incongruities? For starters, they include breaking up regions that have unique identities, or lumping together unlike areas.

The new District 5 is enormous. It also embraces far more than its share of unincorporated county territory, while in, say, District 1 residents are represented by the municipality and can take their troubles to city hall.

Another irony

Strasser Kauffman spoke of an irony when she argued that the demographics approach to redistricting actually "creates divisiveness...It artificially creates differences (in people) where we actually may have been working well together," she said.

MPC's Yamada believes, on balance, that the redistricting is "a good thing" for the region, but inevitably the process led to imperfect results.

Referendum on downtown zoning: Your guide to understanding issues locals rather than tourists. Within certain limits, art galleries that include a worker studio could be established. So could an antique shop.

In the RC, the de facto motel-apartment district, existing restaurants and new liquor stores would be legitimized.

What are the key arguments in favor of this loosening of restrictions?

Many in town say the 1984 experiment has been a failure. In the final analysis, there is no such thing as a "resident-serving business," supporters of the ordinance say. Overregulation, they argue, can choke an otherwise healthy commercial sector.

Moreover, they say an injustice was done to the owners of the 17 lots that were "downzoned" as part of the 1984 comprehensive zoning revisions. It should be remembered that far more than 17 lots were downzoned.

Won't the new zoning package encourage Carmel's further commercialization?

The ordinance addresses that issue by putting "caps" on key commercial uses. Jewelry stores would be restricted to the existing number, which is 32. While restaurants would be allowed in the RC, the maximum would be eight. That number — eight — equals the number of restaurants that were in operation before the RC was established nine years ago.

Will this ordinance really make the permit process faster for hopeful business operators?

Yes. In fact, Mayor Ken White said weeks ago he thought people were so focused on the controversy, they overlooked the "streamlining" elements of the package for which there appears to be universal support.

New businesses that don't present controversy and meet health and safety standards may receive permits over the counter at the planning department. Such businesses to be spared planning commission review (and expense) include restaurants, art galleries, gas stations, groceries and real estate offices.

Does the ordinance have any other provisions?

It removes the requirement that every new business on Ocean Avenue must receive a use permit from the planning commission, and replaces that with new design controls and a prohibition on new restaurants and specialty food shops.

The ordinance also would establish new protections for the residential district by setting new noise standards, as well as limitations on hours of operation for businesses that generate a lot of traffic.

Top River School spellers to compete in Peninsula-wide spelling bee

'Celebrates academic excellence'

By SCOTT BREARTON

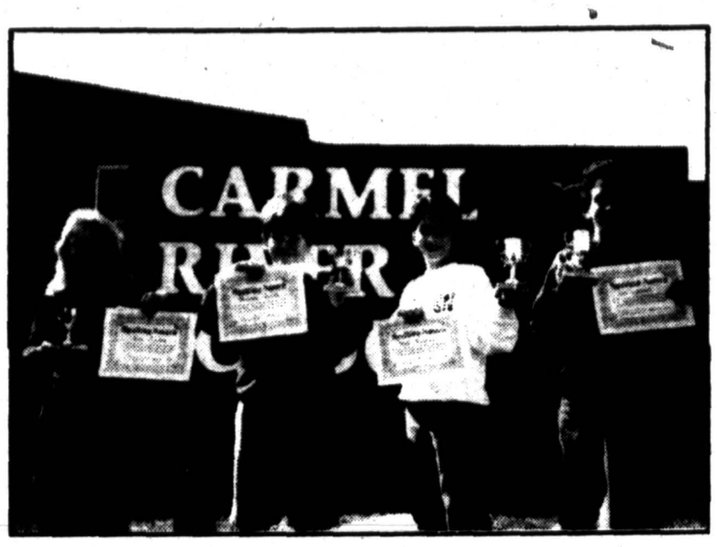
THE TOP fourth and fifth-grade spelling champions from River Elementary School received trophies and certificates March 8 for their excellent showing in a spelling bee held recently.

"It celebrates academic excellence in spelling," said River School Principal Sharron Douglas.

Among the words they handled with ease were punctual, significant and constitution. But they had trouble with the difficult "maneuver."

Pictured are (from left to right) fourth-grader Desire Olmstad and fifth-graders Brendan Kinion, Matt Heligman and Lee Lightfoot.

Finalists Heligman and Lightfoot will go on to compete in a Peninsula-wide spelling bee sponsored by the Lyceum of Monterey County. The event will take place at 10 a.m. Saturday, March 13 at Carmel Middle School.



Kinion and Olmstad will serve as alternates in the event the finalists are unable to attend.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

From our mailbag

LAST WEEK I received a letter from one of my readers, Olga Hagar. She was distressed about a puppy, a labrador-shepherd mix, that was run over in Carmel the night of February 25. Olga was most concerned about dogs roaming the streets without their owners. She asked me to remind my readers to keep your pets indoors or in your safely-fenced backyard unless you take them out on a leash. Even the most perfectly trained dog can bolt off leash, and we do have a leash law, so please obey the rules and keep your Best Friend safe from harm.

Leukemia protection

What do you do when your kitty-cat has been diagnosed with feline leukemia? Should you still spay or neuter it? Should it receive regular vaccinations? And what about other cats in your household?

The feline leukemia virus is so unpredictable that it becomes frustrating trying to do the right thing for all of your cats. To make matters worse, veterinarians disagree about the effectiveness of vaccines, although they generally believe some protection is better than none and recommend leukemia vaccinations.

It is possible that your cat can become negative for the virus after being tested positive. For that reason, it has been recommended that you retest approximately eight weeks after the original test. Your FeLV-positive cat should receive routine immunizations for distemper, cold viruses and rabies, but the leukemia vaccine does not have any known benefit to an FeLV-positive cat.

Although anesthesia can stress an FeLV-positive cat, many veterinarians feel it should still be spayed or neutered. In the long run, for example, a female's cycling in and out of heat would be more stressful than the anesthesia and surgery would be, according to some veterinarians. This is a topic you should discuss with your doctor so that you can make an informed decision.

If your kitty-cat shows any signs of respiratory illness, take him to your veterinarian immediately. Prompt treatment can prolong his life. Some veterinarians recommend one-fourth tablet of echinacea daily as an herbal immune boost for the leukemia-positive cat, and this can be found at health food stores.

Since leukemia vaccine has not been proven 100 percent effective, it would be to your advantage to keep your infected cat away from your healthy felines. It's also important for your kitty to be in a stress-free environment and that definitely means keeping him inside.

I have had my share of FeLV-positive cats and I've found that they can have a happy and comfortable existence by following the tips I've mentioned. It's up to you so learn all you can about this devastating disease. The best cure is prevention and a healthy indoor cat has the best chance of staying healthy!

See you next week.

Carmel Valley Outlook

Strasser Kauffman eagerly awaits life after 5th District

By SUSAN BECK

KARIN STRASSER Kauffman has announced she is leaving politics behind. But some may be wondering if she means for good.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors' Fifth District representative for the past 10 years, Strasser Kauffman said March 4 that she has decided to shift gears and step away from the political spotlight when her term expires in June.

She sat down with Carmel Valley Outlook reporter Susan Beck on Monday, March 8, to reflect on her career and look to the future.

Pine Cone: How did you get involved in politics?

Karin: I have a degree in international relations and comparative politics, and I always expected to work for the common market abroad. I taught political science for 15 years.

I chose politics because it was the biggest challenge. It was almost an all-male field. The guys would stand around talking about politics and the women weren't included.

Plato and Aristotle were right in that politics is a noble profession and a moral endeavor. Planning and working together for the future separates us from the rest of the animal world.

Instead of going your own way, you shape society for after your own existence. And, it's ever-changing and a lot of fun.

Pine Cone: When did you decide to run for the office of county supervisor?

Karin: A number of individuals and groups approached me about the job. At the time, most of the issues were related to Monterey County. I was on several grass-roots boards and there was a great unhappiness with the process and also the outcome.

There was corruption and disrespect for the public. Both Carmel Valley Ranch and Spanish Bay were not good decisions for this area. It was desperate times.

The question was — could trust be restored in government? We needed different procedures, new working habits and a new way to treat the public.

I said that if I took the job I would not do it alone. And, I've never had to. The support from the constituents is dedicated, talented and committed.

Pine Cone: What do you think are your greatest achievements as a supervisor?

Karin: Being able to see the fruits of my labors. It took about two or three years to establish a trust in our government. I spent most of my time undoing past procedures and creating a new course. I wanted to get the people to return to the fold and work with government, which I think I have.

Also, establishing the land-use planning that established clearly understood regulations, and making land-use designations for each and every parcel in Monterey County.

The Carmel Valley Master Plan and the Big Sur Local Coastal Plan are both sought after as examples of area plans by other communities all over the country.

As a scholar, I found developing these plans has been a real exciting endeavor.

Then, there's the budget. It's balanced and on time every year. It's the biggest battleground for me year after year. To balance the budget we need to cut back instead of increase taxes. We need to integrate the work load with other agencies. It's the new politics. The public will be better served with less government that is more efficient.

Pine Cone: What are your greatest disappointments as a supervisor?

Karin: I don't focus on disappointments. It's too debilitating if you let yourself dwell on things that are not going right. I focus on what can be done to change it. The thing that disturbs me most are people who exercise their options or power by stopping something rather than keeping options open.

Pine Cone: Why did you decide not to run for the office of county supervisor this time?

Karin: When I came into the office, I was not a career politician. I wanted to work hard and give the position my full attention. Now, I prefer a change of pace.

Pine Cone: What are your immediate plans?

Karin: There are so many things that I have put on hold — some real sacrifices. I have friends all over the globe, and I am very eager to get back with them.

I want to travel extensively. It's the greatest pleasure.

Being outdoors more. I used to spend part of each day outdoors horseback riding or hiking. I am really looking forward to that. And, gardening. I enjoy that. It keeps stability and peace of mind.

I want to take a break and have a different rhythm in my life for a time.

Pine Cone: Are you considering any new job offers?

Karin: I've had some very interesting job offers — two since my announcement

'The support from the constituents is dedicated, talented and committed.'

elsewhere in the state. But, I'm not going to let myself look at them.

Ultimately, but not soon, I want to work on something where I can combine work time and time with my family and friends.

There are a number of different challenging spots where I could effectively focus on a particular issue or project that is of great personal concern to me.

I'm going to hold back. I want to make my next decision slowly and carefully just as I did the one to become a supervisor.

Officials, residents lament Karin's bowing out from supes' contest

By SUSAN BECK

WITH KARIN Strasser Kauffman out of the supervisorial race for Monterey County's 5th district, some might think Sam Karas would be gloating.

Not so.

He says he was as surprised as everyone else who heard the news last week that Strasser Kauffman would not run for another term after having served for the past 10 years.

"I was shocked," said Karas, who, for the first time, would have been running against Strasser Kauffman after last week's federal court decision to reconstruct the supervisorial voting districts. "I had no idea that she would do this," he said.

Wishing her well in her future endeavors, he said, "I will miss her very much. She was an ally on the board and on redistricting."

Sylvia Panetta, a long-time friend of the supervisor's, responded to Strasser Kauffman's decision by emphasizing she has always represented her district.

"Environmental sensitivity"

"Paramount in her mind," said Panetta, "is the environmental sensitivity of this area and the need to preserve the beauty of what we enjoy every day."

She added that, as chairperson of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, Strasser Kauffman exerted leadership through her political strength and teamwork.

"She understands that, in a democracy, leaders have to participate in the process by listening to their constituency, making decisions based upon the needs of their area and, finally, their own principles. Karin has always done that."

Attorney Skip Lloyd, a Carmel resident, has known Strasser Kauffman for many years. He often found himself on the opposite side of the fence over the Hatton Canyon freeway project issue, but respects her dedication to service for the 5th district.

Lloyd said it is to her credit that she thoroughly investigated the likelihood of the current Caltrans freeway plan getting a approval from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Working diligently

Lloyd said although the question of the Corps is not settled, and Caltrans has not given up on its plan, "Karin has worked diligently to bring about short-term solutions while the long-term solutions are pending."

A proponent of the Hatton Canyon freeway project, Joseph Noto, a retired dentist who lives in Carmel, agreed with Strasser Kauffman's own assessment that, while she has served well for two terms, new blood and a fresh outlook are needed.

"She has made many difficult decisions," said Noto. "She has thoroughly done her homework before arriving at her decisions. Her experience on the board will serve her in good stead. I just cannot

Tularcitos Parent Club's spring event to benefit elementary school students

HERE'S YOUR chance to shake off the winter doldrums at the Tularcitos Spring Fling, a fund raiser to benefit Tularcitos Elementary School students.

This year's event is slated from 6:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. on Friday, March 19 at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, located on Carmel Valley Road in the village.

Highlights will include: dancing to the Mike Marotta Jr. band, participating in a live and silent auction, winning door prizes and enjoying finger foods from 20 area restaurants.

Over 180 items will be auctioned off at the Spring Fling, according to Jeanne Hale, president of Tularcitos Parent Club. Many items have been donated by parents and area businesses.

Keeping the essence

While the names may have changed over the years, the essence of the eighth annual fund raiser has not. Last year, the 'Sweetheart Ball' netted $5,000 for Tularcitos Elementary School, most of it going to fund new playground equipment, field trips, and special assemblies, Hale said.

"This year we're hoping to double that," Hale said. "Our focus is going to be more in the academic field."

Complimentary wine and soda will be served and a no-host bar will be available. Tickets are $25 per person. Advance ticket purchases are preferred.

Additional information can be obtained by calling Tularcitos Elementary School at 624-2276, or Jeanne Hale, president of the Tularcitos Parent Club, at 624-7813.

understand her change in position regarding the Hatton Canyon freeway."

Noto added a critical time is coming with economic hardships.

"With the loss of Fort Ord and, now, the loss of the DLI, the beneficial impact on the $42 million for the freeway cannot be underestimated," said Noto.

Carmel attorney, Anne McGowan, who has worked with Strasser Kauffman over the years, said, "I think she's done a tremendous job as supervisor.

She added Strasser Kauffman always made herself available to her constituency and studied everything carefully.

"I hope she continues in political life in some way," said McGowan. "She's an asset to all of us, and would be excellent doing whatever she pursues. For me, she has been head and shoulders above all other supervisors that I've appeared before."

Carmel Mayor Ken White admitted that although he was taken back by the news of Strasser Kauffman's decision, he could understand her line of thinking.

"It's been 10 years of pressure," White observed. "It's time to step back and look at life. She's been a good supervisor and has always responded to what I needed in an efficient, timely manner."

Ileene Crane-Franks, a Carmel Valley real estate broker, said she does not believe that government positions should become careers. "It's a civil obligation."

She was as surprised as everyone else, said Crane-Franks. "Karin has a lot to offer. She has a tremendous amount of knowledge in putting things together. And, as I've said before, I'd like to see her move onto something else in government at a higher office."

Roger Williams, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, said he is sorry to see her go.

But, he added, "the grass is a lot greener on the other side, particularly, if it's in Washington. Certainly, she's capable of taking on any type of political task put in front of her. We are all very fond of her."

Dick Heuer, a director of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board, is also disappointed Strasser Kauffman is not running for supervisor again.

"She's done a fine job," said Heuer. "She is very dedicated and tells the issues as she see them. She stands by what she believes, and has brought a sense of integrity to the office."

Supervisor has made no firm plans

wins his campaign for Congress?

Karin: Not at this time.

Pine Cone: What about a seemingly flip-flop decision not to pursue the Hatton Canyon freeway project?

Karin: I've never hesitated to identify problems and projects as I see them. Being outspoken, I need to call something as I see it. There were major changes in January and February. The funding allocation policies have changed, and with the Clinton administration, the environmental policies have become insurmountable.

I hung in there as long as I could advocating a long-term solution. Now, let's get some short-term relief.

Pine Cone: What do you see as the criteria for the next 5th district supervisor?

Karin: The key to the 5th district is a strong environmental and fiscally conservative focus. And, integrity. There are so many pressures.

There are one or two people who may seek the position that would make fine representatives for this area. I have the greatest faith in the people of the 5th District. They are very smart and will choose a great successor.

Pine Cone: In closing, is there anything else you wish to say?

Karin: I am very grateful to the constituency for their support. Both positive and negative counsel helps make critical decisions.

For all of you who sent unsolicited checks for my campaign, I will be returning them soon. I am deeply touched by your actions.

I am also grateful to the county employees. I couldn't do it without the staff who are, on the whole, very dedicated.

Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce
Survey for Non-Member Businesses

This year is the 40th anniversary year for the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce and we would like to become more effective for our community. A part of being more effective is understanding what a business would like to gain from membership. We are currently surveying our members and we believe that it would be particularly helpful to survey valley organizations which have not chosen to become members of the chamber. If yours is a non-member business, we would appreciate your taking the time to fill out this questionnaire and tell us how we might become a better chamber of commerce for the community and for you. Please send completed questionnaires to Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce / P. O. Box 228 / Carmel Valley / CA / 93924

1. What have you heard about the chamber? We are interested in the positive and the negative.

2. Why has your business not chosen to become a member of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce?

3. What should a chamber do for its members/community and what should it not do?

4. What would the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce have to do or become for your business to seriously consider joining?

5. Would you be willing to come to a chamber event to meet members and learn more about membership? ❑ YES! ❑ NO!

6. Name and address of business and primary contact. (This information is optional)

Saluting women

I WAS standing on Scenic Drive last Friday afternoon watching the light pour through aquamarine waves just as they crested. Spring was everywhere and Carmelites were popping along the boulevard with their walking sticks, on bikes and locked together hand-in-hand.

A woman walked up and stood beside me, watching the waves. "The drama of our community," she said.

I pondered her statement and realized that the natural drama has attracted dramatic people to our area: movie stars, poets, painters, musicians, politicians and community shakers. And a good number of them are gifted women who are committed to bettering our dramatic community.

Eleven women were chosen this year to receive awards by the Monterey County Commission on the Status of Women. And hundreds of people jammed the Monterey Vineyard to honor them.

It wasn't easy to come inside to a dark cavern surrounded by wine barrels. The sun was burning brightly outside and the hillsides were as green as the Land of Oz. But it was worth it to hear these dramatic women speak and to hear others sing praises of them.

"What an unusual place to meet," said Sam Farr, "in this dark dungeon. But I see incredible light from faces..."

With that, awards were handed to 11 women who have made dramatic contributions to Monterey County.

"I have a confession to make," said Maggie Bennett, a Carmelite who has been educating men and women about midwifery for 20 years. "The first time I attended this event five years ago I secretly wished I could receive this award ... this kind of makes up for me not making the cheerleading squad."

Bennett established the Monterey Peninsula Birth Center, works on midwifery legislation bills, and teaches. She said getting the obstetrics community to accept midwifery was akin to Ford Motor Company endorsing bicycles as a major transportation form.

Mae Johnson, principal at Monterey High School and award winning educator, was welcomed warmly by the audience. She said, "I'm going to embarrass them as I usually do," and then called her children from the audience to stand up. "I call them my steak and potato friends."

Rose Luna-Regalado, founder of the Monterey County Latino Social Workers, a teacher and mentor, said she went to college and got a masters degree at age 35 - a single parent. And she cried unabashedly when she dedicated her award, a Waterford crystal vase, to the memory of her father and also to her mother's 77th birthday.

"I get real emotional when I think of the women models in my family," she said.

Kathy Merritt, president of the King City Chamber of Commerce and prolific community activist, made her thank-you short and sweet. "My most important focus is on the children of the community," she said.

Rosie Murillo, who played a critical role in implementing Monterey County's first perinatal treatment program, spoke of her heritage as the daughter of Watsonville farmworkers. She said she became an adult at the age of 12 when she watched a woman's baby dying from a bad heart.

"Women do not have to fit the mold created by men who preceeded us," said Carla Pew, Gonzales city manager and the only female in the county in such a position. She said a woman's softer touch is often better at resolving crises than a domineering approach. "Women are good listeners. There don't have to be winners and losers. They are open and direct with others."

None of the supportive men in the audience seemed to take offense at this.

Helen Rucker, a lifetime human rights activist, called her husband "Saint" James for supporting her career. And when there was loud applause she said, "I have a lot of friends in this audience. I invited them."

Marjorie Troutman, a teacher, counselor and now president of the American Association of University Women, was humble when she accepted her award. "I don't feel I've done as m uch as the others, but there's still enough time."

And Elaine Whisenand, president of the Salinas Valley chapter of the American Association of Retired People, asked, "Why me?" And added that it was nearly St. Patrick's Day because somebody just handed her the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Sheri Thomas accepted a posthumous award for Jean Thomas, a woman described as a visionary in Monterey County education. "I am merely trying to make a contribution," Jean had said in an interview before her death.

It seems that's what all these women, and many more unsung volunteers and community leaders, are trying to do... just to make a contribution.

The drama continues...

INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL was the theme for the Symphony Guild fashion show at the Hyatt Regency. Jean Mahoney, center, modeled jewelry. She is accompanied by Margaret Robinson, chairwoman for publicity, and guild president Rickie Titherington.

JANICE AND MARK Egerman performed an elegant waltz for the entertainment of patrons at the Symphony Guild fashion show.

VIRGINIA STANTON was joined backstage before the show by Jeena Piccuta, who wore an exquisite Korean outfit.

on after such a watery winter. But the professional and volunteer models who pranced down the ramp at the Symphonie D'Elegance World of Fashion show at the Hyatt Regency Monterey last Saturday afternoon would rival any bed of flowers.

There were walking shorts, swishy dresses, floral suits and bathing suits. But it was the children who stole the show. Little girls in floral frocks and boys in sailor suits just did their thing. A few wrong turns maybe, but that made the show all the jollier.

Rickie Titherington, president of the guild, wasn't on stage. But she should have been. Her brilliant multi-colored silk ouffit was a knockout.

John Myszak, husband of event chairwoman Marti Myszak, did take to the stage elegantly. He also emceed the event, introducing the exotic entertainers.

The international show opened with a Korean fan dancer and was followed by an Italian opera singer, and waltz demonstrated by Janice and Mark Egerman.

Children then trundled out in beach suits with sand buckets. Jewelry was modeled by Jean Mahoney, a Susan Sarandon look-alike. And there were some jokes from a couple men in the audience about a crystal pin placed on her backside.

There was lots of leisure wear. And Lucille Huntington sported one of the western outfits on display.

And one model was merely wrapped in floral drapery.

Gloria Costa did a good rendition of the Charleston in her sequined dress. And the Myszaks danced together onstage.

But biggest surprise was saved until the end when Virginia Stanton stepped out from behind the curtain. She sallied down the ramp in a fire engine red suit, waved her scarf, and lifted her skirt a little for emphasis.

It was a dramatic event, all right. However, there was a conspicuously small turnout compared to years past.

According to Bernadette O'Keefe, campaign director, the United Way of the Monterey Peninsula 1992 Campaign Awards Banquet at the Doubletree Hotel was more serious than usual perhaps, because the campaign came in at $200,000 less than last year.

She cited the military pull-out, the William Aramony scandal and the recession.

Nevertheless, 75 awards were given to businesses and individuals for their efforts in the program.

KENNETH C. GOOLD

Kenneth C. Goold

Kenneth C. Goold, a member of a pioneer Carmel family, died March 3 at his home at Del Mesa Carmel. He was 86.

Mr. Goold was born at the family home in Carmel on May 21, 1906. Before starting his own business, the Carmel Cleaners, in the 1930s, he worked with his parents, Mary Ann Machado Goold and Charles O. Goold, early residents and property owners in Carmel. Mary Goold's parents, Christiano and Mary Machado, immigrated from the Azores on a whaling ship. Their first home was the whaling station at Point Lobos. They subsequently moved to the house at Carmel Mission, where Mary Goold was born.

The Goolds owned and operated Carmel's first livery business, at Ocean and Junipero avenues, now the site of the Goold Village Inn. They also had a dairy on the corner now occupied by the Mediterranean Market. Later the business was moved to a site at San Carlos Street and Ocean Avenue, now occupied by the Dick Bruhn store.

Mr. Goold's wife, Agnes, died in 1987. He is survived by a son, Kenneth Jr. of Broadway, N.C.; two grandchildren, and a great-granddaughter. At his request, no services were held. After cremation, the ashes were scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Marian M. Grenier

Marian Mattson Grenier of Carmel died Wednesday, Jan. 27, at the Hospice of the Central Coast following a stroke a week earlier. She was 83.

Mrs. Grenier was born in Ogden, Utah, on March 1, 1909. After attending schools in that area, she became a registered nurse, a career she continued for many years following her move to Los Angeles and her marriage.

She subsequently served as supervising office manager to the then newly established Beverly Hills Clinic and in a similar post for Hahnneman Hospital in San Francisco.

Following her retirement in 1977, Mrs.. Grenier moved to the Monterey Peninsula, where she was active in civic and cultural activities. She lived at Pacific Meadows in Carmel.

Survivors include a daughter, Molly Grenier of Carmel; two bothers, Ted Mattson of Reno, Nev., and Marcus Mattson of Los Angeles, and a granddaughter.

A memorial service was held at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea. After cremation, the ashes were scattered at sea. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

David E. Ferguson

David Edward Ferguson, a retired business executive and a former resident of Pebble Beach, died Feb. 27 at Manor Care Nursing Center in Sunnyvale. He was 82.

Born on June 21, 1910, in Yonkers, N.Y., Mr. Ferguson was raised in Belfast, Northern Ireland. He was a graduate of the University of Kansas and lived in the Kansas City area and Atherton before moving to Pebble Beach in 1975.

An avid golfer, he was a member of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club. He belonged to the Scottish Society.

Survivors include two daughters, Lucy Barnes of Chicago and Fray Below of Sunnyvale; a sister, Mai Potruch of Arcadia, and five grandchildren.

Private services have been held. The Lima Family Sunnyvale Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the California Parkinson Foundation, 2444 Moorpark, Suite 316 San Jose, 95128.

Lois G. Jenison

Lois Georgia Jenison, a retired Naval Postgraduate School librarian, died Feb. 27 at the Victorian Residential Care Home in Carmel. She was 70.

Born Feb. 16, 1923, in Oakland, and reared in Newman, Mrs. Jenison had lived in Seaside since 1950 and had worked as a librarian at the Naval Postgraduate School more than 20 years.

Mrs. Jenison is survived by three sons, Bruce, of Alameda, Gary, of St. Louis, and Ken, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and four grandchildren.

A memorial service was held at Hill's Ferry Cemetery in Newman. The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, Attention: Kathy Sellers, Suite 500, 1150 17th St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036.

Georgene P. Jones

Georgene Porter Jones, of Pebble Beach, a businesswoman and artist, died Feb. 13 at her home. She was 60.

Born Dec. 8, 1932, in Quinter, Kan., she attended the University of Oregon in Eugene, where she met and married her husband of nearly 40 years, R. Merrill Jones.

The two moved to Pebble Beach in 1953. Mrs. Jones was a talented potter and a co-founder and partner of Peninsula Potters of Pacific Grove, and had a workshop and kiln at her home. From 1979 to 1982 she owned and managed Craftsman's Gallery at Heritage Harbor in Monterey.

She was a member of the board of Consumers Cooperative of the Monterey Peninsula. She was also an active member of the Promise Investment Club and the Carmel Valley Women's Network, and a supporter of the YWCA Battered Women's Shelter, the American Cancer Society and the Hospice of the Central Coast.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Jones is survived by two sons, Kevin of Sunnyvale and Brian of Placerville; a daughter, LeeAnn of Pebble Beach; her mother, Nellie Porter, and a brother, Merlin Porter-Borden, both of Frederick, Md.; a sister, Julie Fair of Las Vegas, Nev., and two grandsons. A memorial service was held Saturday at the Unitarian Church in Monterey. Private cremation took place under the direction of the Paul Mortuary, and her ashes were scattered at sea.

The family suggests that contributions in her memory be sent to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

Elmer Knutson

Elmer Knutson, of Pebble Beach died Feb. 26 at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. He was 85.

Born March 11, 1907, in New Haven, Conn., Mr. Knutson had lived in Pebble Beach for 15 years. He was a graduate of Northwestern University in Evanston, ILL.

He served in the U.S. Navy and Navy Reserve for 26 years before retiring as a lieutenant commander. Mr. Knutson was a member of Carmel Presbyterian Church and the Fort Ord Golf Club.

He is survived by his wife, Kerstin; two sons, Karl of Dallas and Jack of Fremont; and two daughters, Pamela Knutsoll of Pacific Grove and Noel Knutson of Carmel Valley.

Memorial services were held Tuesday at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea. Inurnment was held privately. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Best not shilly-shally where love is concerned

INDECISIVENESS, VACILLATION and hesitancy can be, and often is, deadly when the issue is love. Help us, Lord, not to waffle, shilly-shally nor procrastinate when we are moved to tell those near us what they mean to us.

When we hesitate to tell a wife, a mother, a father, children or close friends, we may find it is too late. It does little good to send a $100 floral piece to a mortuary chapel. Opportunities to make a commitment to love are missed for many reasons —timidity, suspicion, fear, defensiveness—but mostly because of pure and simple laziness and the pervasive syndrome, "I'll do it tomorrow." Ask God to give us the wisdom and the courage to express our love. May we never let one opportunity pass by, one chance slip through our fingers, when we have the urge to show that we care. May the sun not set in the west this day before we tell someone close to us how much they mean to us.

The only procrastination worthwhile is putting off until tomorrow what we ought not to do at all, and if we're lucky, that tomorrow may never come. Amen.

Ballroom dance classes offered weekly

The Hidden Valley Dance Center is offering ballroom dance classes every Sunday from 5-6 p.m. and 6-7 p.m. at the center on Carmel Valley Road just before the village. A light dinner follows the classes. The cost per couple is $30 and reservations are required. For more information call 659-3115.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are needed to deliver 250 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 280 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 25 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually a sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to prepare meals at the Meals on Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The agency also serves lunch to about 75 seniors at the facility every day. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Companies sometimes earn public recognition for efforts to hire older men and women. In Pennsylvania, the state's Department of Labor and Industry turns the recognition into an annual event, honoring outstanding employers of the elderly in a Hall of Fame. The latest large-corporation winner is an insurance company whose three office sites conduct campaigns to hire the elderly. On division recruited 50 men and women from a retirement community to assemble and copy claims, provide customer service and sort mail. Among the attractions: they offered flexible schedules, recreation programs shaped for older people and a subsidized cafeteria.

She has been riding steep roller coasters for decades, always in the front seat for the best view. A heart attack and bypass surgery two years ago haven't stopped here. For her, the rides aren't stressful but serene fun.

JIM COTA TRANSFER & STORAGE ARMY CONTRACTOR OF THE YEAR

Jim Cota Transfer & Storage, of Monterey and Tacoma, Washington, was awarded Contractor of the Year by the Department of the Army, Military Traffic Management Command (MTMC), Western Area. The announcement was made by Ted Williams, CCO, Oakland Regional Storage Management Office.

Jim Cota Transfer & Storage was chosen among the 314 contractors from nine western states who supply services to the MTMC. Jim Cota Transfer & Storage provides non-temporary storage for the transportation offices at Fort Ord and the Naval Postgraduate School.

Award selection was based on results from the quarterly warehouse inspection report, promptness and accuracy of documentation furnished to MTMC, and a strong professional working relationship between Jim Cota Transfer & Storage and MTMC.

"Quality service is the highest priority in our organization, so it's very gratifying to have our efforts appreciated and recognized," said Jim Cota, president of Jim Cota Transfer & Storage.

Women's voices share their strength year-round

Enquiry

You who go out on schedule to kill, do you know there are eyes that watch you,
eyes whose lids you burned off,
that see you eat your steak and buy your girlflesh and sell your PX goods and sleep?
She is not old,
she whose eyes
know you.
She will outlast you.
She saw her five young children
writhe and die;
in that hour
she began to watch you,
she whose eyes are open forever.

By JOHN DETRO

IT HAPPENS to be Women's History Month. Yet the artistic statements of strength and substance occur all the time.

Certainly among this planet's finest poets, Denise Levertov will make her first peninsula appearance at 8 p.m. Friday, March 12.

She will read under two banners — Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation, Monterey Peninsula College English Department — in Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall.

Tickets will be available at the door — $10 general and $7 for students, Tor House members, seniors. Information: 624-5068.

Born in England, Levertov came to this country in the 1940s after serving as a nurse in World War II. She married the writer Mitchell Goodman and became a naturalized citizen (1955). Today she lives in Seattle and teaches part of the year at Stanford University.

Her range must be called extraordinary. Some poems ring with ancient Goddess mysteries while others display great common sense about the dance called politics. (She has been an editor for such publications as The Nation and Mother Jones.)

Reviewing her first book, poet James Wright called Levertov "one of the best living poets in America." Since then she has published more than two dozen volumes of poetry and criticism. Appearing last year were Evening Train (poems) and New and Selected Essays.

Recommended without qualification.

Arts & Leisure

'Re-enchantment' the goal

DURING WOMEN'S History Month, Monterey Bay Women's Caucus for the Arts will sponsor a daylong conference at Santa Cruz Art League — Creative Feminine: Re-Enchanting Society.

The conclave will occur on Saturday, March 27, with morning panelists to include Tandy Beal (dancer), Gloria Akasha Hull (poet), Martha Casanave (photographer), musicologist Luciana Lombardi (moderator).

"A noon concert," says spokesperson Rosy Penhallow, "will include outstanding local women composers and dancers such as Santa Cruz Chorale, Linda Arnold, Studio Ballet Dancers, Tandy Beal Company."

Participants will be invited to join "a movement celebration" led by dancer Margaret Moore. Small afternoon discussion groups led by professional artists will allow participants to network.

The conference will conclude with a reception for the 25 pairs (poets and painters) who have created collaborative pieces about the creative feminine. Poets will read their works between 4-5:30 p.m.

Pre-registration forms are available at the Art League (526 Broadway) and recommended since seating is limited. Cost: $15 general.

The Pine Cone Arts&Leisure Section offers two scholarships to students or low-income women who otherwise might not attend. Call 624-0162 about these, and 685-0744 for other data.

PENNY VIEREGGE (left) renders Hecuba in the Staff Players production of The Trojan Women at Indoor Forest Theater through March 27. Andi Hogan as Cassandra was called "a garlanded apparition with a dangerous allure" by Pine Cone critic John Dotson. For reservations, call 624-1531.

A Carmel Tradition for Over Three Decades

Dixieland Festival brings much joy to its thousands of followers

By WILLIAM MINOR

(Editor's note: The reviewer is a writer, jazz musician and teacher at Monterey Peninsula College. His book about jazz in the former Soviet Union has been accepted for publication by Temple University Press.)

LONG BEFORE the Original Dixieland Jazz Band made the first recordings in 1917, a form of novelty/minstrel/ragtime/brass band/blues "fusion," if you will, was being played from Los Angeles (yes!) to Baltimore, with stops in Denver, Oklahoma City and even (yes again, of course) New Orleans along the way.

Call it what you will — trad or repertory or even the misnomer "Dixieland" — a form of music people love descended on Monterey with a vengeance last weekend.

The music started Friday night, but its spirit is best embodied in the Saturday morning parade: fun and festive — kicked off by the 7th Infantry Division Band playing (the inevitable) Saints Go Marchin' In, and closed out with a fire truck carrying The Saint Louis Rivermen playing (the inevitable) 'Way Down Yonder in New Orleans.

In between, the parade offered everything from pink, turquoise and lavender dressed Flappers doing their ritual dance, to clowns shedding large bubbles from a bucket to 80-some-year-old Edna Lewis playing her saxophone atop a bale of hay. The extramusical frills may threaten to supersede the music at times, but they never quite succeed in doing so.

Entertainment value

That music has its roots in a time when entertainment, unashamedly, was a major component of America's indigenous art form, jazz.

The Blue Street Jazz Band, a group from Fresno, still manages to combine overt showmanship with genuine musicality (they all teach the stuff: "music," that is; showmanship you get on your own). Novelty is wed to hard trad playing; zany energy (embodied in the group's leader, trombonist Dave Ruffner) with youth and verve (by way of 21-year-old vocalist Sherri Colby). The band offered everything from a round-the-hall romp on Stars and Stripes Forever, R & B saxwork on Mardi Gras Mambo, Kid Ory patois on Creole Song to Sherri Colby's intimate, "breathless" vocal on Keeping Out of Mischief Now.

Original unit

The most original, and outrageous, group is Igor's Jazz Cowboys, from Tempe, Arizona: a "country" band replete with madolin and dobro guitar alongside tenor sax and trumpet.

Their set commenced with What Do You Do with a Drunken Sailor? and before their time was over I'd heard Mariachi music, Greek clarinet, the yodeling blues of Jimmie Rodgers, Django Reinhardt's Minor Swing (and this "down home" group does swing, among all the funning), and even intimations of the Grateful Dead — all interspersed with salty limericks and one-liners (supplied by Igor Glenn, who's a kick) such as "Not getting any better; come home at once" converted to "Not getting any; better come home at once."

Personality

Given the repertory nature of so much of this music (If I had a new CD for each time I heard The Original Dixieland One-Step or Jazz Me Blues, I'd have a fantastic collection, indeed), and granted its (still) improvisatorial challenges, people do tend to cling to particular groups on the basis of personality preference, rather than criterion strictly musical.

The somber, nearly funereal (black tuxed) Creole Jazz Kings, from Turlock, offered a highly competent Storyville Blues, but were not nearly as engaging as the more loose, haphazard at times, 20th Century Jazz band from L.A. — its veteran clarinetist (by way of Red Nichols and Wingy Manone) Bill Wood adding same class; nearly octogenarian drummer/leader Bud Lyons described how, ordering three minute eggs in a restaurant, he was asked to "pay in advance"); and the group navigating nicely between a pure fun Shake That Thing and very professional Do You Kow What It Means to Miss New Orleans?

Sassy lady

Southern Illinois University English Literature professor Jean Kittrell fronts The St. Louis Rivermen group, and she's not at all in keeping with her credentials. She's a vibrant, sassy, barrelhouse-smiling delight; yet even more surprising is sousaphone player David "Red" Lehr, the most subtle, expressive, nuance-oriented large man playing a very large instrument I've ever heard. He can actually make that flatulent horn flutter, and he did wonders with the old war horse, Tiger Rag.

The Natural Gas Jazz Band (San Francisco) is a tight, steady group: the first "Dixieland" Americans to ever play Siberia (a Soviet film crew having produced an interesting video on this trip) and, this past weekend, soprano saxophonist Bob Murphy provided sturdy interweavings on New Orleans Shuffle (which shuffled into a two-beat stomp) and a handsome solo on Something for Sidney (a tribute to Bechet), the band providing a "Spanish tinge" beat behind this tune.

Those Stompers

Local group The Abalone Stampers provided (once again) Jackie Coon's warm vocal and instrumental (flugelhorn) musings and Bob Phillip's inventive piano on Back in Your Own Back Yard.

But a disappointment to me was the Warehouse Reunion Band. My wife and I raised our kids on their music, and pizza, but their set contained a bit too much of the flavor of the latter, I'm afraid (a re-union that didn't quite ignite), and I came away with a hunger for same real music: that of Mike Vax, a Stan Kenton alumnus who usually fronts a solid group under the modest moniker of Great American Jazz Band, but one which a pianist Bob Secor (whose bop voicings were a hearty welcome after so much trad) and substitute singer Dee Dee Gray, providing a handsome Satin Doll, may justify.

Conversion

The group miraculously converted Zipidee-doo-da into (believe it or not) pure joy, and closed out with a very musical (excellent rhythm section support on) Tin Roof Blues.

Some time ago, Leonard Feather asked Duke Ellington if Dixieland would survive: whether, in 1984, people would still be playing Royal Garden Blues and Muskrat Ramble.

"Sure they will," Ellington replied. "People are always looking for something to hold onto for the purpose of nostalgia; good old homespun ideas."

So 1993 is here, yet I did not see, or hear, this past weekend's music as mere sentimental re-creation. It provides vital continuity in a nation that doesn't have much; it provides essential — fun-filled and festive — fare for those fans who turned out in brightly costumed droves to celebrate and savor their kind of jazz.

The Chieftains, regarded internationally as the most famous exponents of Irish music, will take that wealth there for a benefit concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 20.

"The nature of their playing and the extensive use of improvisation ensure that no two performances are the same," Donoghue said. "The Carmel concert will feature the full ensemble" — Kevin Conneff on bodhran, Paddy Moloney on Uileann pipes, Matt Molloy on flute, Martin Fay and Sean Keane on fiddle, harpist Derek Bell as well as Kelly Anne O'Sullivan (United States National Irish Step Dancing Champion).

Single tickets for the concert only cost $25. Benefit tickets including admission to an after-concert reception are $50 (half that tax deductible). Ducats may be obtained at the facility box office during regular weekday hours.

All proceeds will go to Friends of Sunset Foundation, directly supporting Sunset Center activities.

Thoughtful comedy by Kundera to open at Cherry Hall

PERHAPS HIS best-known piece of writing is The Unbearable Lightness of Being.

A philosophical comedy from the files of Milan Kundera — Jacques and His Master — opens at Carmel's Cherry Hall on March 12.

The production by Monterey Peninsula College Drama Department will continue through April 4 with performances at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 7 p.m. Sundays.

Conrad Selvig directs the three-act play which relates the humorous adventures and mental meanderings of a servant and his master as they journey through France on horseback.

Cast: Ron Genauer as Jacques, Peter Eberhardt as his master, Barbara Zito, James Brady, Kevin Hanstick, Mark Roberts, Michael Robbins, Susanne Burns, Ivy Cates, Pat Rutowski.

Tickets cost $12 general and $10 (students, seniors). Reservations may be made through Monterey County Theater Alliance at 655-3200.

NOT INCIDENTALLY, Robert Reese of Cherry Hall reminds that there still are theater openings in this year's schedule. If you're interested in doing a show under that roof, contact him at 624-7491.

A SPECIAL performance of The Foreigner — at MPC Main Stage Theater on Thursday night, March 11 — will benefit Family Resource Center. Curtain time's eight o'clock.

The Larry Shue comedy centers on a shy fellow who pretends to be a foreigner with no knowledge of English; he ends up privy to everyone's secrets.

The cast includes Michael Lojkovic, Robert Colter, Nancy Kocher, Connie Erickson, Craig Dunbar, Bill Lindsay, James Affinito. The show will run through March 20.

Reservations: MCTA (655-3200) or MPC Box Office (646-4213).

THE REPERTORY Division of Western Stage will open Cabaret Old Town (Salinas) in June with the country gospel musical Smoke on the Mountain. That word came this week.

Also offered at the Cabaret will be The World Goes Round — from the "best of Kander and Ebb's Broadway and Hollywood scores."

In August at the Hartnell College Center for the Performing Arts, the popular Kopit/Yeston musical Phantom will open.

Other classical presentations there will include Chekov's Uncle Vanya and A Midsummer Night's Dream by Avon's bard.

For complete information on subscription and special season packages, call 755-6816.

BOB COLTER and Nancy Kocher are featured in The Foreigner. This Larry Shue comedy plays through March 20 at MPC Main Stage. (See Theater Roundup.)

Wine buffs can enjoy area festival

MEMO TO wine buffs and hospitality professionals: Scores of wineries will take part in the Monterey Wine Festival on March 14-16 at the Monterey Conference Center and other sites.

Organized by the National Restaurant Association, the conclave will feature tastings, speakers, a scholarship fund auction, Taste of Monterey cuisine tours and winemaker luncheons where participants dine well and hear presentations by leading California producers.

Registration will occur between 1 and 5 p.m. Sunday, March 14, at the Conference Center, along with a preview of wines for auction. A detailed hour-by-hour schedule will be available then.

Some fest highlights:

• Leading chefs who'll present creations during the Taste of Monterey adventure include Michael Jones, Deborah Wenzler, Jon Kasky, Donald Cope, Bunyon Fortune, Tracy Gentry, Beat Giger, Ron Belmel, Daniel Barduzzi, Pado DiMartini, Peter Charles.

• From 2 to 4:30 p.m. Monday, March 15, the aforementioned auction will raise funds for hospitality and wine industry scholarships. This eighth annual event will spotlight some of the best California wines in a series of beautiful oversized bottles.

• Each evening's tasting will focus on a particular category. Monday night, for example, will be white wine — nearly 400 of the finest California whites.

• Speakers include the famed Louis Martini and many other experts. They will consider topics like the use of blending varieties, marketing, the organic grape-growing movement, "the real truth about wine and health," mountain winegrowing, Chardonnay winemaking styles, offering affordable alternatives and German Riesling — "hot wine for the '90s."

• On the Wednesday after the festival, Monterey Wine Country Associates will offer a daylong tour of Carmel Valley.

To pursue participation or obtain answers to questions, call the National Restaurant Association at 800-525-FEST.

The Reel Stuff: Ambiguous 'Passion Fish' offers taut moments

By PAUL WOLF

WHEN MAY Alice is miserable, which is often, the camera trespasses. So close and under harsh light, it captures her every line and freckle, doing injustice to her fine features.

When May Alice is hopeful, she is absolutely radiant. In one scene she dreams she has regained the use of her legs, and we observe a lustrous redhead bathed in soft light.

John Sayles' Passion Fish (now showing at the Galaxy 6 Cinema) is distinguished not only by powerful performances from Mary McDonnell (who plays May Alice) and Alfre Woodard, but for Sayles' own director's flair.

Appropriately, his screenplay has been nominated for best screenplay, and McDonnell for best actress.

Despite the touches of virtuosity, though, the film sometimes struggles, and seems too much an exercise in movie-making. So in the end, it is less an effective whole than a collection of compelling scenes, boosted by the stirring images of the bayou and pulsating Zydeco.

Turn for worse

The movie is about the trials and the faith of two women who, at first meeting, have nothing in common.

May Alice is a successful soap opera actress whose career is ended abruptly when she is paralyzed in an accident. She sees little else to do but return to the Louisiana setting of her girlhood and start a new life consisting mainly of television. Chantelle, the Woodard character, is hired as her nurse.

Writer-director Sayles offers many subtle touches, like the early instance of foreshadowing. May Alice has run through several live-ins, one more unsuitable than the next. All seem intent on making the wheelchairbound woman a captive audience for their own sordid affairs.

"If you got any personal problems, don't tell me," May Alice would make sure to tell Chantelle.

To this point, Chantelle has been a blank slate, an absolute mystery. We know she is black, new to the South, younger than May Alice but remarkably savvy. But we've been told a story will unfold and one certainly does.

The movie offers more than psychodrama. In fact, its dramatic high point is the visual climax as well: a cinematic tour of the crocodile-infested swampland. The film becomes a sly tribute to the bayous and Cajun culture.

While the film should be applauded for avoiding trite avenues and keeping the audience clueless about where it is going, ultimately the filmmaker himself may have been in the dark.

Minor male characters — the somewhat unlikely love interests of the two women — are introduced with freshness but serve no discernable purpose in the movement of the plot. And the ending is not a particularly satisfying surprise.

Because Passion Fish never resolves the questions it raises, it is not a great film, but Sayles offers a work of gripping moments under his confident director's hand.

Awarded ★★★

County Symphony welcomes Irish pianist into spotlight

RIGHT BEFORE St. Patrick's Day, internationally-praised Irish pianist John O'Connor will join Monterey County Symphony in its next dates at Sunset Center in Carmel.

Maestro Clark Suttle will lead the concerts scheduled at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 14, and 8 p.m. Monday, March 15. They're billed as "a celebration of Beethoven's genius."

Suttle's organization will be joined by O'Connor performing the Concerto No. 3 in C Minor for Piano and Orchestra (Op. 37). The program begins with the Overture to Egmont and concludes with the Symphony No. 7 in A Major (Op. 92).

Tickets to both performances are available; reserve by calling 624-8511.

O'Connor last appeared with Monterey County Symphony in March of 1991. He was applauded enthusiastically by capacity audiences.

Highly regarded for his poetic style, lyrical sensitivity and rich variety of keyboard color, O'Connor first gained widespread attention in this country with the inaugural release of his complete Beethoven sonata cycle on the Telarc label (1986). Subsequent volumes in this series have been similarly well-received.

A familiar figure on Irish television and radio, O'Connor works to improve educational and performing opportunities for young musicians there. He lives in Dublin with his wife and two sons.

LOS ANGELES Piano Quartet will offer a concert at 8 p.m. Friday, March 12, in Sunset Center Theater.

This event is sponsored by the Chamber Music Society of the Monterey Peninsula — an engagement supported in part by monies from California Arts Council, Monterey County Cultural Council, AT&T Pro-Am Youth Fund, private contributors.

The unit consists of Joseph Genauldi (violin), Randolph Kelly (viola), Peter Rejto (cello), James Bonn (piano).

They will play Mozart's Piano Quartet in G Minor (K. 478), Dvorak's Piano Quartet in D Major (Op. 23), the Brahms Piano Quartet in G Minor (Op. 25).

Each ensemble member has distinguished himself as a soloist with major symphony orchestras in the United States and Europe; each has a major faculty appointment at a university.

Said the Irish Times critic: "They are without a doubt a superb group who have achieved a unity of music-making that we look for from a great string quartet but hardly ever get in piano quartets."

THE METROPOLITAN Opera will broadcast Mozart's Magic Flute on Saturday, March 13 — a live presentation. Picking up the feed at 10:30 a.m. will be KAZU Public Radio.

Making Met broadcast debuts will be conductor Donald Runnicles, Elizabeth Carter as Queen of the Night, Peter Seiffert as Tamino, Eric Halfvarson as Sarastro.

Other artists: Kathleen Battle (Pamina), Manfred Hemm (Papageno), Thomas Stewart (The Speaker), Heidi Grant Murphy (Papagena).

DON'T FORGET Monterey Opera's upcoming version of The Threepenny Opera by Kurt Weill.

It will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday, March 19, and 3 p.m. Sunday, March 21, at Monterey Conference Center's Steinbeck Forum.

Tickets ($22 general and $18 for students and seniors) may be bought in advance at Do Re Mi Music. Or call Monterey County Theater Alliance regarding charge and mail orders.

There will be a special ($10) preview at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 18, with a meet-the-cast reception afterwards.

At the helm are Stephen Tosh (conductor) and Gina Welch-Hagen (stage director).

MOZART SOCIETY of California's next program will be at 8 p.m. Friday, March 19, at the Church of Religious Science in Monterey.

Playing then and there: Stanford String Quartet.

Spokespersons say a "limited number" of single tickets will be available at the door. Cost: $10 apiece.

And the next organ concert at Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer will be at 8 p.m. Friday, March 19. Featured: William Osborne, who has concertized widely across this nation and Europe when not teaching at Denison University (Ohio).

Admission is $10; call 624-3550 for reservations. A six-foot TV monitor is used to give all seats a close view of the performer and organ console.

Dr. Osborne recently edited the organ works of Charles Ives.

Señor Boronda, his wife and their fourteen kids decided that the cheese which they made here in 1864 was the perfect topping for the Ranch Chicken Quesadilla, served with our own selection of baby greens and choice of dressing.

Fresh Local Catch.....$12.95
In the early 1920's Sicilians spent the fishing season in Monterey. Many of them became permanent residents, and have passed on some of their most flavorful recipes used for the Fresh Local Catch – either from the ocean or from one of the rivers. (Ask your waitperson for our daily selection.)

Hearty Venison Stew.....$11.95
Whilst staying at the Old Grand Del Monte Hotel, Sam Morse used to catch game in Carmel Valley. Los Laureles was the place where the party met before and after the hunt. Deer, wild boar, and wild turkey were on the menu. To satisfy this hungry bunch, the chef prepared this Hearty Venison Stew with vegetables and dumplings.

Quarter Pound Grilled Hamburger.....$6.95
Italians and Mexicans agreed that this juicy Quarter of a Pound Grilled Hamburger needed their culinary attention. A savory foccacia bread and a zesty guacamole will accompany this American tradition; also available: bacon and Swiss (forgive them, Señor Boronda!)

T-Bone Steak.....$12.95
After a hard day at work, cowboys and cowgirls of our Valley enjoy a good brew, a country song, and a magnificent T-Bone Steak, grilled to perfection, and garnished with their favorite chili (not too spicy, but just enought to wake you up!)

Art roundup: CAA offering a solo show by DeGroat

CARMEL ART Association offers through April 7 a solo exhibit of recent paintings by George DeGroat, past CAA board member.

On view in the facility's Beardsley Room are 18 oils involving such subjects as horses and riders, the human figure, still lifes and landscapes.

DeGroat employs the expressive approach with the gesture of form and color essences being his primary concerns. He teaches painting and drawing at Sunset Center.

The show is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. CAA's on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth in Carmel.

IF YOU enjoy Walt Disney animation art, here's something of real interest.

An exhibit of images from the most acclaimed Disney films will be open to the public for two weeks beginning Saturday, March 13, at The Gibson Gallery of Animation Art (formerly Reid Gallery) in The Barnyard.

The run will open with an RSVP-type champagne reception from 6 to 10 o'clock that evening. Those planning to attend are asked to call 624-4243 well in advance.

Disney Art Editions selected the local site to present the retrospective — from the early Steamboat Willie (Mickey Mouse) drawings up through Aladdin.

The show features not only hand-painted limited-edition cels (colorful works on transparent celluloid), but also "original production cels, sericels and many other examples of animation art both modern and vintage," according to gallery spokespersons.

Since few production cels from earlier animated features and shorts exist, Disney recreates cels from the most classic moments in limited editions.

"The artwork is created by using the original animation drawings from the Disney Archives as references," it is stated.

"Many are hand-inked-line cels — a traditional animation technique that was used to make so many classic Disney films. Others are made using a six-step zerographic process — a refinement pioneered by Disney Studios in the late 1950s."

THE TRADITIONAL title: Dreaming Art. Carmel's Cherry Center has begun accepting art and poetry submissions for its sixth annual array of programs under that rubric.

Artwork must be delivered by March 26 with each piece accompanied by a $15 entry fee. A reception for the artists will be held on Saturday, April 3.

Participants in the benefit show are encouraged to appropriate images from their psyches, dreams, visions, intuition — and adapt them to the media of their choice. Insurance for artwork submitted to Cherry Foundation is the responsibility of the individual artists.

Poets also are encouraged to submit theme-related works. Cash prizes will be awarded for first, second and third-place winners. These entries have a March 16 deadline.

Poets are limited to three poems of not more than 24 lines apiece. The poetry reading and awards ceremony will be held April 24.

Poems must be accompanied by the poet's name, address and phone number with a $6-per-poem entry fee. Send to: Cherry Center, Dreaming Art Poetry, Box 863, Carmel 93921.

AN EXHIBIT of oil paintings by Carmel artist Hans Skalagard has opened at the Maritime Museum of Monterey.

The overall title: Taut Lines and Full Canvas — Pacific Coast Lumber Schooners.

On view through April 18, this show is the first in the new museum's Changing Gallery which will feature the works of celebrated marine artists.

The 10 recently-completed canvases depict in authentic detail what Skalagard describes as the "old faithfuls of the Pacific coastal trade."

He spent his youth aboard sailing ships on the long grain route between Australia and Europe, later becoming a United States Merchant Marine during World War II. He survived four sinkings.

Skalagard studied at the Royal Academy in Copenhagen and with noted marine painter Anton Fisher in New York.

"I was one of the few who knew the last days of the real sailing ship era," he says. "I wanted to put on canvas what the life of the sailing man was like and what he saw — not just paint pretty pictures of ships."

Dramatic brushstrokes and a painstaking eye for detail have won for Skalagard national recognition.

"I learned about the sea's many moods and the elements that affect its appearance," he adds.

The Maritime Museum is in Stanton Center at Monterey Custom House Plaza. Admission is charged. Information: 373-2469.

BARBARA MACK Keith and Michael Peterson have opened The Keith Gallery in the same space that used to house Gallery Mack in the early 1970s.

Location: Paseo San Carlos Court, west side of San Carlos, between Ocean and Seventh in Carmel. It's open daily from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m.

After being absent from the Carmel art scene for more than 15 years — spent in Seattle at Gallery Mack NW — Keith and Peterson offer paintings, sculpture, art glass, jewelry and graphics "by nationally and internationally acclaimed artists."

GALLERY AMERICANA of Carmel will host a reception for artist Tinyan Chan from 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, March 13.

And his work is getting a one-man show there through March 19.

He offers finely-detailed floral still lifes, traditional Chinese street and harbor scenes, contemporary Canadian landscapes.

Bogas fills the gap beautifully at Sunset

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

AT VERY short notice, pianist Roy Bogas served the Keyboard Artist Series and stood in for the scheduled Grigori Sokolov, who was unable to fulfill his commitment.

Bogas is no stranger to peninsula audiences, having appeared here many times in recent years.

He is a seasoned performer and his choice of tried and true program favorites was a guarantee of a very pleasurable afternoon for the Sunset Center audience. And that is exactly how it came out.

Clean, gentle

He began with a selection that every well-schooled pianist in the crowd certainly has put his or her hands to. I certainly did, but I can't imagine many of us got the results Bogas achieved with Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso.

From the cleanly played, gently songful opening section with its touches of romantic rubato to the sprightly virtuosic Rondo, it was a sparkling musical outing.

After two of Mendelssohn's ever popular Songs without Words, the artist moved to Beethoven's penultimate work in sonata form, the Sonata No. 31 in A Flat Major, Op. 110, where he demonstrated his great knowledge of the content of the work. His approach was fittingly serious and obviously full of comprehension.

The lyrical and intimate first movement was full of sensitive legato and carefully gauged dynamics. However, the Scherzo movement was overly sober and one missed the humor implicit in its purposely misplaced accents.

The arioso third movement came closest to the ideal in realization. The depth and seriousness of the expressively outlined adagio recitatives were noteworthy in their eloquence and the quiet mastery of voice leading and tonal balance in the contrasting fugal interludes enforced the impression of Bogas' fine musicianly qualities.

Among finest

Brahms' last four piano compositions which make up his opus 119, three intermezzi and a rhapsody, have been played here several times recently and even so, this artist's rendition of this music ranks among the finest.

The Intermezzo No. 1 in B Minor contained much fine-lined, clear-toned melodic outlining. Once again the artist's mastery of legato playing was underlined. The playing was sympathetic and expressive.

The Intermezzo No. 2 was almost a Mendelssohnian Scherzo full of delicacy and elegance. The Intermezzo No. 3 was freely expounded with a sense of personal involvement.

Given full value

The Rhapsody is a major statement and it was given its full value in a spirited and heartfelt performance. Two Chopin nocturnes were played in much the same vein, with the Op. 48, No. 1 making yet another fine musical statement.

Closing the program with Liszt's Mephisto Waltz, Bogas became a romantic virtuoso of enormous statue and skill. Gathering gigantic technical resources, he commanded and controlled his instrument and the music, conveying the exciting shifting moods with tremendous conviction and great rhythmic urgency.

All of his resources available were utilized to bring this pianistic tour de force to a full realization. He could range from the utmost delicacy to great muscular gymastics easily and with full control. All the Lisztian extravagances were present and well accounted for.

After the breathtaking conclusion of the work, Bogas played his own arrangement of the Vocalise by Rachmaninoff and the Revolutionary Etude by Chopin as encores.

RLS poet named a contest winner

ROBERT LOUIS Stevenson's Darian Shingu has been judged a winner in the 1993 Monterey County High School Poetry Competition, the County Cultural Council announces.

Shingu's poem and 19 others were selected from a total of 220 entries submitted by 86 students.

The 20 high school poets will be honored at a poetry reading at 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 17, in Monterey Public Library on Pacific St.

Jazz Tides

Inspired work

TIM JACKSON'S bookings for the 1993 Monterey Jazz Festival seem inspired.

As he revealed the latest names, a sense of excitement occurred. This's what our fest felt like in the creative early years — 1959-63.

Check 'em out:

- Latin star Ruben Blades and his band.
- The Grammy-winning Dr. John as part of a New Orleans show on Saturday afternoon.
- The venerable guitarist and singer Danny Barker. Wow. His transcribed recollections have aided jazz historians tremendously. And he's still performing.
- The Crescent City's Dirty Dozen Brass Band.
- Sunday night tribute to the late Dizzy Gillespie with the Slide Hampton Jazz Masters Orchestra. Tim promised a full personnel list shortly. Special guests will include Paquito D'Rivera, Diane Reeves, James Moody.

McCoy Tyner also won a Grammy at the recent ceremonies. Tim signed the Tyner Big Band right before the price zoomed upward. Pretty good instincts, hm?

The fest will roll Sept. 17-18-19. Tickets go on sale April 1.

MONTEREY BAY Blues Festival (June 26-27) adds these artists to its 1993 roster: Roy Rogers and his Delta Rhythm Kings, wondrous singer Arbess Williams from Sacramento, Tom Ball and Kenny Sultan, Webb Sisters (Sunday gospel stars), Sweet Misery, Rhino Blossom, Bay Area Blues Society.

Brochures already are being mailed out. Call Bostrum Management (649-6544) about tickets.

CARMEL MUSIC Boosters and Carmel Mission Kiwanis members should be proud. Their Sunset Center fund-raiser for school music programs was a financial and artistic success.

At this writing, the profit still was being computed. But organizer Paul Brocchini said: "We're well in the black. And, yes, this will be an annual project."

Vocalists Madeline Eastman and Kitty Margolis pleased the goodly crowd. Former Carmel mayor Barney Laiolo was a big hit when he played gutbucket bass with the Carmel High trad jazzers. ("I did it because I encouraged the group's formation," Barney confided.)

Over at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, Blossom Dearie drew about 175 fans despite the packed jazz agenda hereabouts. Jazz pianist Jimmy Vindiola (he's out at Carmel Valley Ranch) called her vocals "flowers for the ears — little pieces of perfection."

And Blossom's pianism and song selection just get better and better. Facility honcho Peter Meckel said she'll be back: autumntime.

PACIFIC GROVE'S Portofino Coffee House will offer Brazilian keyboardist Webber Drummond's Zen Blend Band at 7:30 p.m. Monday, March 15. Door charge of $6 per.

On Wednesday evening, March 24, Webber will play behind the reading of very good poet Frank Parker. Starts at eight o'clock; $5 apiece.

Those no-cost Sunday night sessions still feature guitarist Joseph Lucido's Mixed Jazz Bag. Drummer Anthony King's on trap set now — and singer Mary Anne Randl sits in frequently. She uses her voice as a rhythm instrument, Flora Purim style.

Flutist Kenny Stahl and Dennis Murphy (electric bass) both are playing beautifully.

MIKE SCHMITZ of KAZU Public Radio has been doing his show From Rags to Wishes for 15 years. It is, in fact, the longest-running format of its kind in the country.

Noting Women's History Month, Mike will offer special material between 8-11 p.m. Tuesday, March 16 — The History of Women in Ragtime.

"There'll be an hour off the satellite by ragtime pianist and historian Max Morath," Mike says. "And then I'll show that women were in on ragtime from the very beginning as composers and performers."

MONTEREY BAY Hot Jazz Society announces "with pride" that Bill Armstrong's Churchill Street Jazz Band will play the MBHJS social on Sunday afternoon, March 14, at Monterey Moose Lodge.

The get-together starts at 1:30 p.m. Costs: $4 (members) and $6 (non-members).

KUUMBWA JAZZ Center of Santa Cruz will spotlight greatness on Monday night, March 15 — tenorman Pharoah Sanders fronting a quintet. Call 427-2227 for details.

CARMEL BOOK EMPORIUM

This fine bookshop emphasizes high quality and 60 sections (ultimately 100) and a big stone fireplace round which folks may browse contentedly. Management promises computerized ordering that assures "the best possible turnaround time."

Special attention is given to mysteries, creative writing, the lively arts - and of course the tops in contemporary fiction. Videos include such special contexts as Oscar-winning Best Pictures over the past 20 years. And PBS productions. And music tapes and CDs (local players too). Before long, Carmel Book Emporium will add a cafe - perfect meeting spot.

On Lobos Lane in The Crossroads (a few steps from Safeway). Open 10-6 Sunday/Thursday; 10-8 Friday/Saturday. 626-BOOK.

MONTEREY BAY COFFEEHOUSE BOOKSHOP

Opened by Estelle Cimino in November 1991, this downtown spot (472 Alvarado St.) has an airy and bright atmosphere that seems made for book lovers. "I've had a passion for books ever since I was a child," Estelle comments. Her caring can be seen in the full children's section, Arts, Self-Help, Business, Spirituality .....dozens of well-stocked categories. And the audio department delights with best-sellers read by excellent performers. "I really believe people come into a bookstore on a quest," she continues. "It's gratifying to be able to help our customers find the treasures they are seeking." The comfy coffee shop serves light lunches and desserts in addition to a fine array of espresso drinks. For-sale music CD's and cassettes provide a soothing and relaxing background. Computerized ordering. Magazines galore. Ample parking in rear lot. Hours: 9-10 Monday-Thursday; 9-10:30 Friday, Saturday. And 10-8 Sunday. 647-1822.

PEPPER PLANT HOT SAUCE

It's not too hot and not too mild, this delicious California-style sauce that can put the fun back into eating familiar dishes. With its pickled peppers and secret recipe, the sauce has begun appearing in area restaurants and markets. (Some folks have actually switched restaurants in order to put Pepper Plant on their breakfast eggs.) Ask your favorite grocer and chef to order by calling the nearest distributor – Frank of Gilroy's Good Egg Co. at 1-842-7881. Postscript: Pepper Plant makes a great Bloody Mary. And there's a new, tasty variation – Pepper Plant Sauce with garlic added. Also Salsa BBQ Sauce and Seasoning Spice.

THE SAN JOSE FLEA MARKET

A thousand garage sales...a hundred farmer's markets...an international bazaar... a country fair...The San Jose Flea Market is Northern California's largest attraction. Open air shopping for fanfastic bargains, good food & refreshments, live entertainment, and fun are in store for the whole family. Over 120 acres of selling spaces, parks, a 1/4 mile shade-covered produce row, more than 2,000 stores, easy in-and-out parking, amusements and 25+ restaurants are devoted to your pleasure and comfort. Open Wed.-Sun. On weekends the entire flea market grounds are open. Wednesday is the busiest day, while Thursdays and Fridays are more like a neighborhood flea market. Admission is free. Parking is $3 per car on the weekends and free parking weekdays. Join our flea market family shoppers at the original (California's oldest) San Jose Flea Market. 1590 Berryessa Road, San Jose between Highways 101 and 680. (408) 453-1110.

Wasserman revisited

THE TITLE'S a long one: Praise, Vilification & Sexual Innuendo — or, How to Be a Critic. Subtitle: The Selected Writings of John L. Wasserman 1964-1979.

San Francisco Chronicle entertainment columnist and much-loved free spirit, Wasserman also was a heavy boozer. "By the late '70s it had become a problem," says the release from Chronicle Books. "In 1979 he died in a drunk-driving accident which also killed two others."

So the hard facts are stated upfront, without a single excuse. This allows Editor Abby Wasserman (his sister) to get on with her work of love and journalistic acuity.

She says she wanted to make sure that "his wonderful humor didn't get lost." The 211-page paperback ($11.95 and out April 16) represents a gift to new readers as well as Wasserman fans like myself who read his columns avidly as soon as they were printed.

John covered the rock music scene, pop, comedy clubs, theater, jazz. His restless soul made a high craft out of reviewing bad movies. He even saw the porn industry as a cultural component and carried on with wit about Mitchell Brothers productions.

No ambiguities

What cut him out of the pack was passion. Wasserman loved what he loved, hated what he hated — and readers never had to plow through layered ambiguities.

Sometimes there's refulgent lingo here along with the accuracy. About jazz artist Bill Evans: "His piano is as God intended. His associates play instruments that can function without the cooperation of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. And Evans wears neither mascara nor boa constrictors. He merely plays the piano with a graceful power, beauty, skill and deceptive simplicity, hunched over the piano in his identifying arc, so still a glass of water could balance on the back of his neck...."

And there's wonderful seeing at many points. Regarding Janis Joplin: "The Who's Roger Daltry could be compared, I suppose, or Joe Cocker. But there's a crucial difference — Janis is, I think, controlled by the music and the lyrics; it is the reverse with Daltry and Cocker. Janis is more comparable to the late flamenco dancer Carmen Amaya than to another singer."

Remember that performers like Woody Allen, Lily Tomlin and Robin Williams were on their ways up during Wasserman's tenure. He did as much as anyone — and more than most — to encourage the talents he respected. This title contains right-on comments about all three.

The writing seems fresh, vital, anything but dated. Asked about her brother's staying power, Abby says: "John had incredibly high energy. Secondly, he couldn't be bored, so he cast around for things to write about that would keep him interested. There was this great candy store of fun things and he moved through it like somebody with an unlimited expense account for candy."

Her faith proves out. It's a vastly worthwhile collection.

THE GOOD NEWS IS YOU HAVE HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.
Finding out you've got high blood pressure is half the battle. With a plan for exercise, weight control, salt reduction and medication, the rest is easy.
If you have high blood pressure, get on a good program and stick with it. And do what your doctor says. Then there probably won't be any bad news.

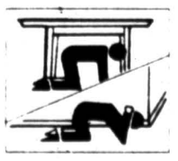
Beat the Quake!
California Earthquake Preparedness
Steps to Take
When an earthquake strikes
Duck, Cover and Hold
Whether you are in your home, a school classroom, a high-rise or another type of building, it is important to know how to protect yourself during an earthquake. Practice what to do during an earthquake and teach yourself and your family members to react automatically when the shaking starts. If you are outdoors when the shaking starts, get into an open area away from trees, buildings, walls and power lines. If you are indoors, follow the steps below.

DUCK
DUCK or drop down to the floor.



COVER
Take COVER under a sturdy desk, table or other furniture. If that is not possible, seek COVER against an interior wall and protect your head and neck with your arms. Avoid danger spots near windows, hanging objects, mirrors or tall furniture.

HOLD
If you take cover under a sturdy piece of furniture, HOLD on to it and be prepared to move with it. HOLD the position until the ground stops shaking and it is safe to move.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE of FREDERICK F. FISHER

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FREDERICK F. FISHER.

A PETITION has been filed by Marguerite D. Fisher in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey.

THE PETITION requests that Marguerite D. Fisher be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held March 26, 1993 at 9:30 a.m. in Probate Dept.: located at 240 Church St., Salinas, Ca.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
VACATION & LONG-TERM RENTALS

We are currently seeking vacation homes and long term rentals for our property management department. We have numerous clients waiting for vacation homes this summer. We also have need of yearround vacation rentals. Why not let your home work for you when you are not using it? We treat your home as if it was ours. We offer peace of mind for our owners, furnish computer itemized statements, and maintain higher occupancy percentages. San Carlos Agency has been doing property management on the peninsula for over 40 years. Call us for more information..
